Japs Announce Soviet Troops Repelled
During Charge

Moscow (U)—A communique from headquarters of the Soviet maritime army on the Siberian-Korean frontier said today that Japanese "suffered great losses" yesterday in fighting around Changkufeng.

The communique asserted the Japanese had made "a number of attacks" on Russian positions on the disputed hill, but had been driven back each time.

(Dispatches from Yuki, Korea, near the scene of the fighting, said the attacks were made by Soviet forces against Japanese positions and quoted Japanese army officers as saying they were repulsed. They also described a heavy Soviet shelling of Japanese lines.)

The text of the communique follows:

"On Aug. 9 Japanese troops again undertook a number of attacks on the Hill Zozernaya (Changkufeng) held by Soviet troops. The Japanese troops were repulsed and suffered great losses. Soviet troops are located along the frontier line except the area on the Hill Bezyannaya where Japanese troops hold a salient extending some 200 meters (656 feet) into Soviet territory, while Soviet troops in their turn hold a salient extending some 300 meters (984 feet) into Japanese-Manchoukuan territory. Artillery fire is going on in the whole sector."

Yuki, Korea (Near the Siberian Frontier)—Japanese troops repelled a charge of Russian infantry and Soviet tanks following yesterday's heavy artillery shelling of Japanese lines, army headquarters announced today.

The four-mile Siberian border front was calm at 10 a. m., after the Soviet cannonade which began shortly after midnight yesterday and lasted until 8 o'clock a. m. today.

After the preparatory barrage, the Soviet infantry charged "Hill 32," one-half mile south of Changkufeng during the night, but was repulsed, the communique said.

The position of the Japanese right flank, about "Hill 52," could not be established definitely this morning, however.

Russians Return Fire

A battery of Japanese mountain guns on the hill had directed its fire to the east yesterday afternoon, apparently against Russian tanks.

The Russians followed with a blanket of fire, and after a half-hour of bombardment the once-green ridge was smoking and scarred by at least 150 shells.

It seemed incredible that men could remain alive under the shelling.

Six-inch shells came over at the rate of six a minute, and numerous direct hits after one or two sighting shots showed the accuracy of Soviet gunners.

From early afternoon the Russians never stopped firing for more than two minutes at a time.

Tokio (U)—Japan is now prepared to concede to Russia equal representation on a joint commission for demarcation of the Siberian-Manchoukuo border, a foreign office spokesman said today.

Japan previously had insisted upon a commission of three Russians, three Japanese and two representatives from Japan's protectorate Manchoukuo, which in effect would have given Japanese the majority voting power in negotiations to settle the dispute over the exact location of the frontier line.

How Far Can You See?

It's a pet theory of ours that one's ability is equal to his vision. In other words, if you can visualize perfection you can attain it. Consider the musician who studies for years with absolute perfection his goal, the artist who pictures a masterpiece and spends a lifetime to transfer it to canvas, the dancer who sacrifices a normal existence to endure hours of physical torture to gain grace and poise, the mother who sees in her son the greatest of all men, all are striving for perfection, but only those whose vision is flawless can hope to attain the highest degree of excellence.

Perfection is a big word but we'll venture to say that's what you'll think about Post-Crescent Want Ads once you use them. Here's one that "clicked" with the first insertion.

Savings Banks Face Federal Trust Inquiry

Probe to Parallel Analysis
Of Assets of Insurance Companies

CENTERED IN EAST

Major Portion of Assets
Reported Piled Up in Five States

Washington (U)—Securities commission experts have begun the spadework for the anti-trust investigation of $12,000,000,000 assets of the nation's mutual savings banks.

In some respects the study probably will parallel the commission's analysis of the $30,000,000,000 assets of insurance companies and the regulation of this huge reservoir of funds to the capital market.

The latter phase of the survey was authorized by Congress to determine whether concentration of enormous assets entailed monopolistic practices.

Like Previous Study

SEC experts already have outlined the job of analyzing the mechanics of marketing securities to insurance companies. Present indications are that the commission's monopoly staff will pattern its study of savings bank assets after its survey of the insurance field.

Pointing up the savings bank inquiry is the fact that about $6,000,000,000, or 50 per cent, of all such assets are held in New York state, and about 90 per cent is piled up in banks in five states: New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

PLANS EXTRA TERM

Mackinac Island, Mich.—(U)—Governor Frank Murphy (above) said today he would call a special session of the legislature to convene Aug. 29.

In addition, the governor said he would call the legislative council and the tax committees of both houses of the state legislature to a meeting Aug. 25 to consider a "threefold" program for the session.

The legislature's work, he said, will include raising and appropriating funds for direct relief; extension of the state mortgage moratorium act, and modification of the state housing act.

Washington (U)—Army engineers have asked district and division engineers to determine whether the Wisconsin Hydro Authority's proposal for flood control and power development on the Wisconsin and Fox rivers would interfere with army interests.

A representative of the engineer disclosed copies of the authority's development plans had been sent to the upper Mississippi valley division headquarters at St. Louis, Mo.

He said the authority had asked engineers informally to decide whether the program as submitted to the public works administration for a loan and grant would injure existing works constructed under direction of the engineers. There were indications army engineers would have no serious objection to the proposal which had the backing of Governor Philip LaFollette.

Expects Early Report

One official said he expected a report from field engineers would be available in a week and would be turned over to PWA and the federal power commission of those authorities requested it. He added it would not be made public.

The federal power commission said no request for a preliminary construction permit or application for a license had been submitted there by the authority.

If the commission determines the proposed power project would affect navigable waters or that power produced would be sold in interstate commerce, the hydro authority would be required to obtain a federal license. The determination may be made by army engineers or by commission engineers.

The commission has authority to issue a temporary permit under which an applicant can complete surveys and arrangements for financing a project. A commission representative said he did not expect the authority, even if subject to federal license, to submit an application until assured of PWA support for the $26,000,000 program.

Chinese reports said the touch-and-go fighters, who have claimed repeated victories over Japanese units throughout China, are increasing rapidly in numbers in anticipation of an expanding guerrilla campaign.

Rumors grew that guerrillas from Pootung across the river from Shanghai, had entered Shanghai's foreign areas and planned a terrorist celebration Saturday, anniversary of the start of Japanese-Chinese fighting in Shanghai.

Fear Terrorism

Defense troops, voluntary units and police estimated to number 15,000 strengthened precautions against the feared terrorism. Apprehensions grew.

The military situation on the Yangtze river front, meanwhile, was subject to conflicting claims.

Twenty thousand Japanese reinforcements were ordered from Hobei, capital of the Anhwei province, to Kiukiang near where Chinese counter-attacks stalemated the invaders' 136-mile drive toward Hankow, provisional Chinese capital.

Chinese reports they encircled 6,000 Japanese 25 miles north of Kiukiang but could not dislodge them because Yangtze floods prevented artillery movements.

Defense Rests in Sheboygan Trial After Plea Fails

Judge Refuses to Direct
Verdict in Favor of
Mrs. Lutzke

Sheboygan (U)—The defense rested shortly before noon today in the trial of Mrs. Lillian Lutzke, 25, charged with the first degree murder of her husband, Milton, 31, after defense counsel failed to obtain a directed verdict of innocence.

Pleading for a directed verdict, Defense Attorney H. S. Humke objected to the submission of possible first degree murder or third or fourth degree manslaughter verdicts in the recommendation.

Circuit Judge Henry A. Detling overruled Humke but requested him to renew the motion after the verdict, if necessary. The judge began his charge to the jury this afternoon.

The defense summoned more than 15 witnesses as it sought to prove that Mrs. Lutzke had been in fear of her husband and had fought with him in defense of her life the night of June 16, when Lutzke died of a revolver shot.

Tells of Quarrel

Final witnesses today, including the defendant's brother and several Manitowoc county deputy sheriffs, testified Lutzke was quarrelsome and Mrs. Lutzke always acted "like a lady."

John Ahl, Manitowoc county, Lillian's brother, testified that on Jan. 27, 1937, Lutzke picked a fight with him at a dance hall near St. Nazianz. He said he walked away from Lutzke, who suddenly the ceiling came down on me and everything went black.

Ahl said it wasn't until next day he learned Lutzke had struck him from behind.

Ahl testified that a year later Lutzke apologized for striking him and said:

"I get streaks like that and I can't control myself. I'm glad they pulled me off you. I might have killed you."

Herman Loos, connected with the Manitowoc county sheriff's department, testified that Lutzke was a known "rowdy," liked to fight at dance halls, and that he once had to "blackjack him to quiet him."

Victim's Mother Testifies

Mrs. Louis Lutzke, mother of the slain man, testified as a state witness today that four weeks before the shooting, while the couple had been staying at her home, Lillian Lutzke had pointed a revolver at Hendaye, France (at the Spanish Frontier)—(U)—Spanish government troops drove a deep wedge between the insurgent strongholds of Balaguer and Lerida in Catalonia today in a sudden shift of the offensive to a new sector.

Dispatches from Barcelona said the Segre river had been crossed between the two centers and a new government line established on the west bank of the wide stream, which flows south into the Ebro.

The offensive is the third trip-hammer blow government troops have dealt insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco's forces in two weeks of pounding at weak spots in his extended eastern front.

The first blow fell July 25 when the militiamen crossed the Ebro and advanced to Franco's onetime

Fires, Loss of Cattle and
Auto Accident Result
In Appleton Area

Chippewa Falls, Wis.—(U)—An elderly couple and their daughter burned to death today as fire caused by a bolt of lightning destroyed their home.

The dead: A. P. Hagen, 80; Mrs. A. P. Hagen, 80; Miss Gunda Hagen, 45.

The Hagen home was on the outskirts of the city. Firemen theorized that the occupants were stunned by the bolt and as a result were unable to escape from the blazing dwelling.

The bodies, burned beyond recognition, were recovered.

Mr. and Mrs. Hagen are survived by one daughter, Mrs. Ted Colby of Milwaukee.

Lightning, wind and heavy rain-storms yesterday afternoon and last evening resulted in fires, loss of stock, an auto accident and felled trees in the vicinity of Appleton but little damage was reported in the city.

A torrential rain unleashed its attack upon Appleton about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Things quieted down until about 11 o'clock at night when another deluge fell.

A third heavy rain set in about 4:30 this morning and it was topped off with frequent thunder-showers during the day which were expected to continue tonight.

A total of 1.68 inches of water fell up to 9 o'clock this morning.

Lightning Hits Barn

Lightning fired a barn at the Robert Russell farm, route 3, Clintonville, about 12:30 last night resulting in a loss of $6,000 partly covered by insurance. The barn, 35 by 90 feet, was destroyed and nine sheep, a pig, one stallion, two wagons, a silo filler and 75 chickens burned. Three horses were rescued. This season's crop of hay and grain was a total loss.

The Clintonville fire department was summoned and succeeded in saving nearby structures.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rieple, Milwaukee, are confined to the Clintonville Community hospital with injuries received in an automobile accident about 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon on Highway 45, 3 miles west of Clintonville. Primary Ballot Longest in Years; 187 Candidates File Papers at Badger Capitol

Head Must Show Why 9
Shouldn't Be Rehired

Madison (U)—When Wisconsin voters enter the polling booths Sept. 20 to select candidates for the November election on four party tickets they will receive one of the longest and most unusual primary ballots in many years.

This became evident today with the passing of the deadline for the filing of qualifying petitions Tuesday midnight.

The secretary of state's office certified 187 candidates for national, state and legislative offices. This number does not include the assembly and county candidates who filed with their county clerks.

There have been reports from sections that the list of the county candidates is exceptionally heavy, thus adding to the length of the ballots.

Brody Doesn't File

Most significant development in Progressive ranks was the failure of Lawrence J. Brody of LaCrosse to file the petitions which would have entered him as a candidate for the United States senatorial nomination against Lieutenant Governor Herman L. Ekern and Congressman Thomas R. Amle.

Ekern supporters, who feared Brody would attract votes from the lieutenant governor and lessen his chances of defeating Amle, the Farmer-Labor-Progressive Federation candidate, rejoiced over Brody's withdrawal.

Governor Philip LaFollette had several conferences with Brody Monday and Tuesday but both denied the governor persuaded him to withdraw.

Brody said he decided to stay out of the race because of professional obligations and the limited time available for making a campaign.

Senator Pope Loses to Clark in Fight for Nomination

Warm Springs, Ga.—(U)—President Roosevelt said today he hoped that Lawrence S. Camp, Atlanta, running on a New Deal platform, would be nominated for the senate seat now held by Senator Walter F. George.

The president, speaking at a luncheon in the Warm Springs Foundation dining hall, said he was glad to have Governor E. D. Rivers of Georgia and Camp, federal district attorney, with him.

With Rivers on his right and Camp on his left, the president said: "We are very much honored in having today as guests of Warm Springs Governor Rivers, who is an old friend of ours, and also a gentleman who I hope will be the next senator from this state."

Camp is among three opponents of Senator George, who is seeking renomination. Rivers is a New Dealer, and Democratic national committeeman from Georgia. So far Rivers has taken no active part in the senatorial fight.

Primaries in Brief

By the Associated Press

Idaho—Representative D. Worth Clark, Roosevelt critic, defeated New Deal Senator James P. Pope for Democratic senatorial nomination; Governor Barzilla Clark trails former Governor C. Ben Ross for Democratic renomination.

Ohio—Administration Senator Robert J. Bulkley, endorsed by President Roosevelt, won Democratic renomination over former Governor George White; Republicans nominated Robert Taft, son of former president, for senator; Democratic Committeeman Charles Sawyer defeated Governor Martin L. Davey for gubernatorial nomination.

Arkansas—Administration Senator Hattie Caraway, president's "old friend," built up widening margin of votes for renomination over Representative John L. McClellan, also a Roosevelt supporter; Governor Carl E. Bailey led in his race for renomination.

Nebraska—Governor R. L. Cochran won landslide Democratic endorsement for unprecedented third term; Charles J. Warner apparent winner of Republican nomination for governor; no senator chosen this year.

Boise, Idaho—(U)—Senator James P. Pope, stalwart New Dealer, conceded defeat today to D. Worth Clark in a close Democratic senatorial primary that was seen as a test of administration popularity in Idaho.

In 631 of 802 precincts Pope had 35,629, Clark 35,776.

Clark is now a member of the house of representatives.

By the Associated Press

James P. Pope of Idaho became today the second administration senator to go down in defeat this year before a Democratic primary opponent.

He conceded this afternoon that Representative D. Worth Clark, an avowed conservative, had beaten him in yesterday's Democratic balloting in which New Deal support was the main issue.

The only comparable case was that of Senator Herbert T. Hitecock of South Dakota who lost his primary race to former Governor Tom Berry, a Roosevelt supporter with conservative leanings.

Pope's defeat tempered considerably the joy of administration lieutenants over Senator Robert J. Bulkley's smashing victory over former Governor George White in Ohio. Bulkley had President Roosevelt's personal support. Pope had been supported by Postmaster General Farley, who spoke for him, and had been openly and recently defended by Secretary Hull for his reciprocal trade treaty stand.

Mrs. Caraway Wins

In the third senatorial race, Senator Hattie Caraway of Arkansas, another whom the president allied with, won his western trip, apparently had a safe margin over her nearest opponent, Republican John L. McClellan.

The Ohio vote assured Democratic renomination of Senator Robert J. Bulkley who, with 7,493 precincts out of 8,501 reported, had

Roosevelt Goes To Warm Springs For Georgia Visit

May Discuss Campaign Tomorrow When He Speaks at Athens

Warm Springs, Ga.—(AP)—President Roosevelt arrived at Warm Springs, his "second home," at 9 a. m. (C. S. T.) today for a 2-day Georgia visit in which he will have an opportunity to discuss, if he chooses, the state's Democratic senatorial primary campaign.

The president's special train pulled in after an overnight run from Pensacola, Fla., where Mr. Roosevelt disembarked yesterday after a 3-week fishing cruise.

He was greeted by officials of the Warm Springs Foundation, institute for infantile paralysis treatment and research.

Interest in the visit reached a high pitch several weeks ago when he accepted an invitation to receive an honorary degree from the University of Georgia at Athens tomorrow morning, and to dedicate a rural electrification project at Barnesville tomorrow afternoon.

Camp Member Of Group Lawrence S. Camp, United States district attorney of Atlanta and an opponent of Senator Walter F. George, administration foe in several legislative matters, was a member of a delegation which invited the president to make the Barnesville address.

Both Camp and George have been invited to sit with the president during the Barnesville address, but two other candidates for the senatorial nomination Sept. 14, former Governor Eugene Talmadge and W. G. Moe, Atlanta attorney, were not invited.

Mr. Roosevelt is returning from an extended fishing trip which started in San Diego, Calif., July 16. Re-entering the United States at Pensacola, Fla., yesterday, he conferred with Governor Bibb Graves of Alabama and Richard Leche of Louisiana, presumably discussing the southern political situation.

The presidential train will stop at Greenville, S. C., Thursday evening. Mr. Roosevelt, stating he would say hello in that state where Senator Ellison D. Smith, a frequent administration opponent, is seeking renomination.

The president in a press conference aboard the cruiser Houston at Pensacola yesterday said the Senator Barkley victory in Kentucky was about what he expected.

Cleveland Reporter Testifies in Hearing on 'Little Steel' Strike

Washington—(AP)—A Cleveland newspaper reporter testified today that national guardsmen roamed the residential streets in Canton, Ohio, during the 1937 "Little Steel" strike, "chasing" people off front porches into their houses and wielding their clubs promiscuously.

The reporter, Garland Ashcroft of the Cleveland Press, told the senate civil liberties committee that on one occasion he saw guardsmen manhandle a boy, George Cory, with no apparent provocation.

The boy, Ashcroft said, was standing on a street corner in a residence area far from the plant at the time the soldiers grabbed him.

Michael Breazu, a CIO picket, testified he was a victim of an unwarranted attack by guardsmen.

Assaults Murray

In testimony yesterday J. G. Stewart, of Canton, an employee of the Republic Steel company who aided a back-to-work movement, termed Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee (CIO), a "self-appointed messiah." He added that he believed Tom Gardier, Republic chairman, was "no Simon Legree."

Chairman LaFollette (P-Wis) put into the record Republic pay roll figures showing the leaders of the back-to-work movement received larger pay during the strike than at any other times, although they did not work in the plant.

The committee's figures showed that Stewart received $12,234.94 in June, 1937, whereas his average June earnings from 1933 to 1936 were $261.72.

Petition for 2nd Overhead Crossing On Superhighway 41

Investigation of the petition of the state highway department for construction of a second overhead on Superhighway 41 beltline in Outagamie county has been started by the state public service commission. A hearing will be called in the near future.

The second proposed overhead will be at the intersection of the beltline, as yet to be completed, at the Winnebago junction-Wisconsin junction of the Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie Railway company, about a mile north of the present grade crossing on Highway 41 west of the city.

The commission also is investigating the proposal of the highway department for an overhead at the intersection of the beltline and the Appleton-Eland line of the Chicago and North Western railroad, approximately a half mile northwest of the present Highway 41 overhead. A public hearing also will be scheduled on this proposal.

Carroll Offers Alibi in Slaying Of Maine Doctor

Claims He Knew Nothing Of Murders Until Told By Newspaper Men

South Paris, Maine—(AP)—Francis M. Carroll, former deputy sheriff, today took the stand and sought to establish an alibi to prove his innocence of the murder of Dr. James G. Littlefield of which he was accused by Paul N. Dwyer, 19, the state's star witness who previously pleaded guilty and is serving a life sentence for the crime.

Carroll maintained he knew nothing of the slayings until he was told of them by newspaper men Oct. 16, three days after the state contends the doctor and his wife were slain.

Counsel for Carroll, Clyde R. Chapman, read a list of 36 defense witnesses, but the name of the former deputy's daughter, Barbara, 13, was not included. Dwyer, in his testimony, had asserted Dr. Littlefield's knowledge of letters in which Barbara accused her father of improper conduct, was a motive for the murder.

Wife Is Witness

The list of defense witnesses included Carroll's wife, Ruby, and some New Jersey police officers.

Chapman, in his opening, said the defense "relies in part on testimony offered by the state."

"It is the position of the defense," he declared, "there are not two murderers in South Paris, and that the person who killed Dr. Littlefield, killed Mrs. Littlefield."

Carroll is on trial only for the physician's murder, but the bodies of both were found in an automobile with Dwyer when he was arrested in North Arlington, N. J., last autumn.

Chapman said the defense would show Carroll attended an American Legion supper the night the doctor and his wife were slain, and that Carroll went from the supper to the sheriff's office.

Asked About Letters

Chapman asked Carroll when he first learned of the letters which the state contends provided a slaying motive.

"At the time of my arrest," answered Carroll.

Carroll said he had never had a conversation with Dwyer relative to conduct of Barbara.

Chapman then took Carroll through his activities of the day of the murders. He went to a fire in the afternoon, returned to jail office about 4 or 5 o'clock p. m., and went to a legion supper at Norway about 6:30 p. m., he said.

Q "How long did you stay at the legion hall?"

A "I left some time before the meeting started."

He then returned to the jail office, he said, and later received a legal paper before returning to the legion meeting.

Laona Man Sought After Missing Court Hearing

Milwaukee—(AP)—A capias was issued for the arrest of Kenneth Allen, 31, of Laona, Wis., after he failed to appear at a habeas corpus hearing here yesterday.

Allen, fighting extradition to Gogebic county (Mich.) on assault and kidnapping charges, had been at liberty on $1,000 bond. Circuit Judge Otto Breidenbach declared the bond forfeited.

Allen is accused in connection with the abduction and beating of Henry Paul, Duluth (Minn.) labor attorney, during the upper Michigan lumberjack strike a year ago. Governor Philip LaFollette had authorized Allen's removal to Michigan but a habeas corpus writ halted extradition.

William Weston, Wakefield, Mich., logger, is under $3,000 bond at Bessemer, Mich., in the same case.

Present Russo-Japanese Strife Is Outgrowth of War Over Generation Ago

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

New York—(AP)—The squabble between the Soviet and Japan over a pipeline on the landscape known as Changkufeng hill is really a hang-over from the Russo-Japanese war of more than a generation ago.

The Mikado's forces won that conflict, which wound up in the treaty of Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 29, 1905, with President Theodore Roosevelt acting as mediator.

Some military experts claim that actually Russia had won the war, but didn't realize it when her generals threw up the sponge. Anyway, the Japanese carried home the golden trophy, deeply engrained with victory.

Moscow, Tokio and London now appear to be playing about with the idea of John Bull trying his hand at mediation in the present unpleasantness. Guns are being fired in anger in such increasing numbers as to endanger world peace.

Basis of Dispute

Mediation is always worth while, and it may halt this undersized war, but it won't remove the underlying cause of the trouble.

The fight between Russia and Japan revolves about the hegemony of the Far East—a rivalry to determine which shall dominate that vast section of the globe with its splendid natural wealth and uncounted hundreds of millions of people.

The story really begins hundreds of years ago, when both Russia and Japan started reaching out towards the uncharted regions for expansion and power. That was in the sixteenth century.

The Russian family of Stroganov, traders in a big way, were responsible for the conquest of Siberia. In 1579 with permission of the czar they sent an expedition of 800 men into the Siberian wilds in command of the outlaw Vassil. Under the magic of his sword grew a great new empire.

Less than a hundred years later the Russians had reached the golden valley of the Amur river. This skirts the northern boundary of present day Manchukuo, Japanese-controlled kingdom.

Japs Driven Out

Meanwhile the Japanese grasped at Korea in 1902, sending a large invading army into this ancient nation. Chinese help appeared and the Japanese were driven out. A few years later the Manchus, who also had clashed with the Russians on the north, placed Korea under vassalage.

The Chino-Japanese war of 1894-5 established Korean independence. In 1903 the Japanese landed troops in Korea, charging that the Russians had attempted to occupy a strip of Korean territory containing rich timber lands. The Japanese never withdrew and ultimately annexed Korea.

In 1903 Japan proposed a pact with Russia reorganizing the interests of each in Korea and Manchuria (now Manchukuo) but guaranteeing the integrity of both Korea and China. When Russia refused, the war was on, and has been showing signs of life ever since.

Roosevelt Breaks Precedent Set by First President

Washington Refused to Intervene in Congressional Elections

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington—Although the name of George Washington is primarily associated in national politics with the tradition against a third term, it turns out that the father of our country was the sponsor of another precedent, namely that presidents should not intervene in elections of members of congress.

Evidence to this effect is disclosed in the letters of George Washington, and particularly in a communication which, by a strange coincidence, was addressed to a member of congress from Maryland who was seeking a second term and who had implied publicly that he had the endorsement of President Washington.

The member in question was Colonel John Francis Mercer, and to him the president wrote under date of Sept. 16, 1792:

"I came now to another part of your letter, and in touching upon it, I do not scruple to declare to you that I was not a little displeased to find by a letter from Capt. Campbell to a gentleman in this neighborhood, that my name had been freely used by you or your friends for electioning purposes, when I had never associated your name and the election together; and when there had been the most scrupulous and pointed caution observed on my part, not to express a sentiment respecting the fitness of any candidate for representation that could be construed, by the most violent torture of the words, into an interference in favor of one, or to the prejudice of another."

"Conceiving that the exercise of an influence, however remote would be improper; as the people ought to be entirely at liberty to choose whom they pleased, to represent them in congress; having pursued this line of conduct steadily, my surprise, and consequent declaration can be a matter of no wonder when I read the following words in the letter above alluded to."

"I arrived yesterday from Philadelphia, since which I find Col. Mercer has openly declared, that Mr. Richard Sprigg, Jr., informed him that Bushrod Washington told him that the president in his presence declared, that he hoped Col. Mercer would not be left out of the next representation in congress; and added that he thought him the best representative that now goes or ever did go to that body from this state."

"I instantly declared to the person who showed me the letter, that to the best of my recollection, I never had exchanged a word to, or before, Bushrod Washington on the subject of your election, much less to have given such a decided opinion; that such a measure would have been incompatible with the rule I have prescribed to myself, and which I had invariably observed; that I was therefore directly or indirectly with the suffrages of the people, in the choice of their representatives. I added that I wished B. Washington might be called upon to certify what, or whether any conversation had ever passed between us on this subject, as it was my desire that everything should stand upon its proper foundations. Other sentiments have been reported as mine that are equally erroneous."

Col. Mercer was a member of the second and third congresses and governor of Maryland.

Washington's Theory

President Washington's theory that the congressional elections should not be interfered with by the chief executive was in line with his philosophy not only against factionalism, but also against presidential influence upon the legislative body itself.

Presumably Col. Mercer had won the nomination when the letter from President Washington was written, so it was not merely a voice raised against the expression by members of the party as to their own choice of candidates, but the right of the people to choose without having a president of the United States use his office to influence such an election.

The impropriety of a presidential intervention in congress elections has again and again been emphasized by a critical public opinion.

When the late President Wilson sought to defeat by public letter the nomination of Senator Vardaman of Mississippi, the voters resented that step and elected him anyway. When Mr. Wilson called for the election of a Democratic congress in Nov. 1918, in a period of national crisis, the people refused the request notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Wilson had risen to great heights of popularity, due to the war enthusiasm, then had any other president for many years.

Mr. Roosevelt already has intervened in primaries in Ohio, Kentucky, Oklahoma, California directly and indirectly in other states. Probably his most direct participation will be in Maryland, where he has determined to do all in his power to defeat Senator Tydings because he steadfastly refused to be a rubber stamp and believed, instead, that he was reflecting the wishes of the people of the state of Maryland. They alone can decide the issue.

Wage Scales for Building Trades Listed in Letter

Debenack, Union Official, Notifies Mayor of Existing Levels

A copy of wage scales prevailing in the Appleton Building Trades council has been sent by Charles Debenack, president, to Mayor John Goodland, Jr.

"We request you to use them for reference when incorporating wage scales in the specifications of any work that might be contemplated in the city, whether it be road or building construction or any type of building repair," Debenack wrote in the letter.

The wage scale stipulates double time for holidays and time and a half for overtime. Following are hourly wages for workers whose work week is 40 hours:

Asbestos workers, carpenters, millwrights, grinder operators, puddlers, form strippers, rock drillers, $1; cement finishers, masons, $1.25; lathers, $1.05; engineers, $1.25 to $1.37; ironworkers, 75 to 90 cents; electricians, sheetmetal workers, 90 cents; helpers, wrecking laborers, pipe derrickmen, pit or dump men, painters, 75 cents; terrazzo helpers, marble workers, 80 cents; general laborers, concrete laborers, waterboys, watchmen, 60 cents.

Wage scales for workers whose work week is from 40 to 45 hours follow: truck drivers, 44, 65, 75, and 85 cents; mason tenders, 65 cents; plaster tenders, 70 cents; mortar makers, 75 cents.

Schwerke Jests With Rotarians, Says Success Hinges on Publicity

"A local boy who made good," Irving Schwerke, internationally known music critic, recalled some of his "first musical impressions" at the expense of several local Rotarians when he addressed their club at Hotel Northern Tuesday noon.

Mr. Schwerke, who is general European representative and Paris editor of the Musical Courier, said the wire works whistle was one of his early musical impressions and he was evicted from the plant when he suggested it be tuned and worn to return to Appleton this summer for a visit, he observed that the "whistle is still out of tune." William Buchanan, official of the firm, asked whether Schwerke would tune it for them and he replied, "Yes—at so much an hour."

Another early musical impression was that of Frank Harwood, former pastor of the Congregational church, singing "a hymn just a shade out of tune." Schwerke said he called the pastor's attention to the offkey vocalizing and was told "It makes no difference, son, God doesn't listen for the pitch pipe."

Recalls Song Recital

A song recital at the church by a New York woman also was recalled by the music critic. He said there was some doubt whether she would be permitted to appear on the stage scantily clad but it was finally decided her dress was like a "good sermon—it was the proper length and covered the subject." Schwerke said the singing of Gene Orbison and Joseph Koffend was some of the "finest harmony" he had ever heard.

"Many different interpretations are applied to articles and I often am asked how I dare to criticize when I can't sing an opera or play a violin," the speaker continued. "I merely reply that it's not necessary to lay an egg in order to appreciate the omelette."

The layman thinks of musicians as persons out of contact with reality but the successful ones are cool headed business men and workmen, he declared. Schwerke said he admired them more for their business ability than their artistry. Success is impossible without publicity and musicians and singers encourage the press to take up personal incidents.

"Not only was Paderewski a super pianist but he was a master showman and the Polish artist made millions," Schwerke asserted. American performers have a more natural ability but they usually go wrong in business affairs and fail to attain the heights of immortality, he concluded.

Truck Drivers Given to Sept. 1 to Get License

Truck owners have been given a second additional month, to Sept. 1, to secure their 1938-39 licenses. Chief of Police George T. Prim today received a letter from the secretary of state requesting that no arrests be made of truck drivers without license until Sept. 1. The request was made because the governor and secretary of state received many requests for additional time by truck drivers now unemployed.

27 Persons Hurt in 29 Traffic Accidents Last Month in County

Twenty-seven persons were injured in twenty-nine accidents in Outagamie county during July, according to records of the Post-Crescent. This was five less accidents than occurred in July of 1937 and one less injured.

However, there was one person killed in a traffic accident this year while the 1937 July record was unmarred. Four persons were killed in traffic accidents up to Aug. 1 this year as against fourteen for the same period of last year. A total of 179 accidents were recorded up to the first of the current month this year as compared to 213 for the period last year. There were 163 persons injured this year, 15 less than the number for the first seven months of 1937.

If the average number of accidents in the county does not increase during the remaining five months a considerable reduction in the number of accidents, injured and killed will be shown.

Coalition Candidate Says Act Contains Some of Worst Features of NRA

Stevens Point—(AP)—Robert K. Henry, coalition candidate for governor on both the Republican and Democratic tickets, asserted here yesterday that the Wisconsin fair trades practices act "contains some of the worst features of the defunct NRA."

Business men operating under the act should be given an opportunity to vote on the question of continuing under government restrictions and paying code assessments, Henry said in an address.

A Milwaukee judge recently gave it as his opinion that code authorities are not in favor of

Cheap Power, Plenty of Water During Dry Months Aims of Reservoir Plan

Wisconsin's proposed $26,000,000 PWA project for the construction of a mighty reservoir in the upper Wisconsin river valley combines several objectives long sought by the state.

Production of cheap power by the Wisconsin river, diversion of part of the stream's water to the Fox river to provide more power for one of the state's richest industrial areas, flood control, creation of a recreational region in the heart of the state, and pollution abatement are the salient aims in the project.

The plan, long held feasible by engineers, involves the construction of a reservoir in the valley of the Little Eau Pleine river, which empties into the Wisconsin river in the southern part of Marathon county.

Back some miles from its mouth, the Little Eau Pleine flows through a wide valley. It is here the reservoir will be built.

Topography Suitable
The topography of the land lends itself to the project, according to engineers. Near Mosinee, a few miles north of the Big Eau Pleine, flood waters of the Wisconsin will be tapped by a canal and led into the present Big Eau Pleine reservoir. From here, water will flow through a tunnel into the Little Eau Pleine reservoir, which will be about 40,000 acres in size. The water will be released during low months on the Wisconsin and Fox rivers.

The continuous, minimum flow of the Wisconsin river assured by the vast storage in the Little Eau Pleine basin makes possible the development of the power sites at Knowlton, just below the reservoir in Marathon and Portage counties, and at Necedah and Germantown, sites in Juneau and Adams counties some 50 and 70 miles downstream.

In the three sites lies a vast pool of power enough to increase by one-tenth the electric energy now annually generated for consumption in Wisconsin—227,000,000 kilowatt-hours.

Appleton Area Benefits
Through a double utilization of this water resource by diverting some of the excess stored from the Wisconsin to the Fox river at Portage and thence into the Winnebago pool, (Lakes Winnebago, Poygan, and Koshong) a series of three natural reservoirs near Oshkosh, Neenah-Menasha and Appleton, another major objective is attained.

In the Winnebago pool, the water will be stored again for release to the lower Fox. The use of 1,500 cubic feet of water per second, drawn from the Wisconsin and sent down the Fox from the Winnebago pool, will be of inestimable value to that region.

Flood control is another great objective of the plan, control possible only through the construction of the Little Eau Pleine reservoir with its storage of the Wisconsin's waters during flood stage. The reservoir will remove beyond doubt the danger of disastrous flood.

Game Center
The fourth objective of the project is the recreational region which will be thrown open to the public. The reservoirs of the upper Wisconsin are already developed from the standpoint and the Big Eau Pleine flowage, now two years old, has started to furnish a breeding place for water fowl, and the larger reservoir—nearly six times larger in area flooded—is destined to become a great rearing ground for aquatic birds.

The proposed project will aid the pollution problem in both Wisconsin and Fox rivers immeasurably. The large bodies of water created in the reservoirs will help to aerate the water. The lower and middle Fox become badly polluted at times, and the additional water from the Wisconsin river will provide a needed flushing.

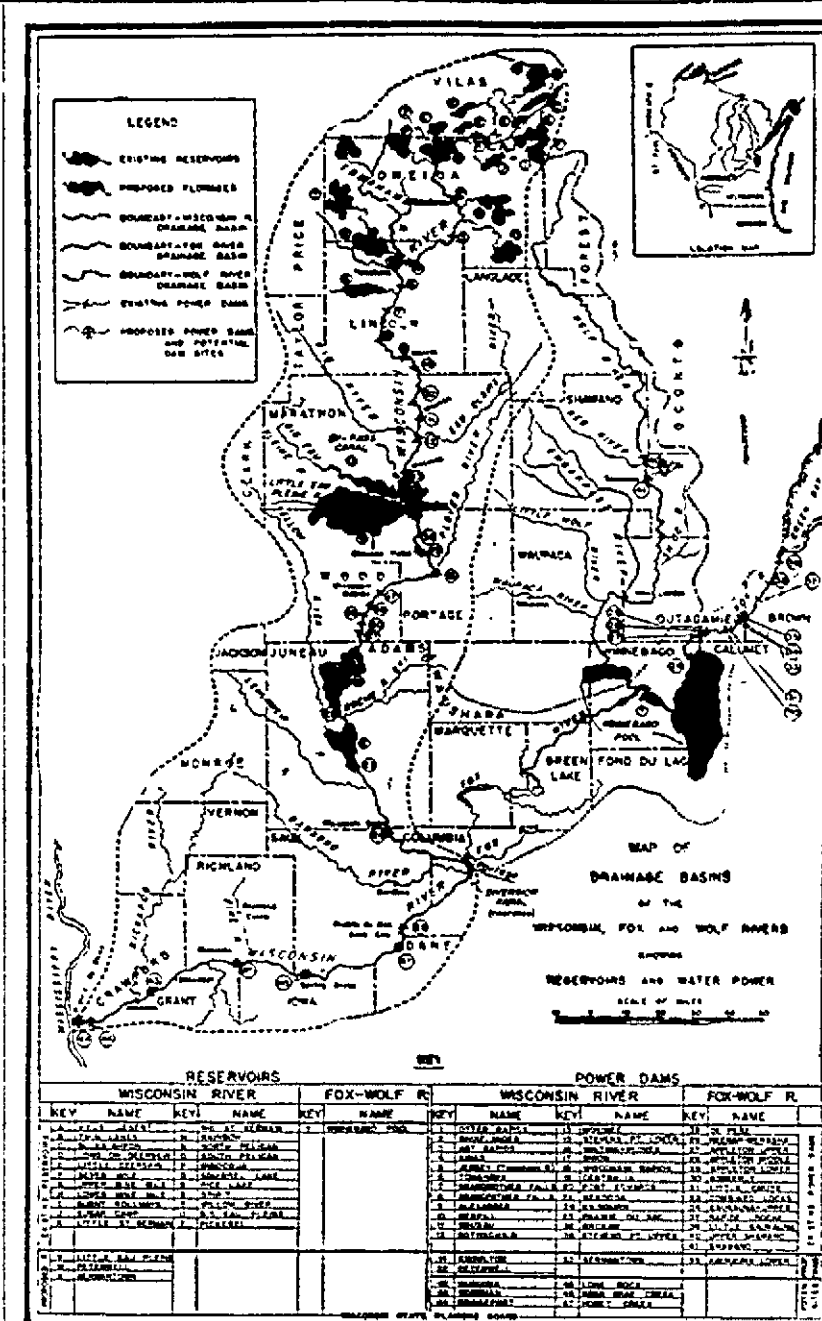

Starting at Mosinee in Marathon county, this enterprise calls for the modernization of the dam spanning the Wisconsin river there. It will be enlarged and strengthened to form a large pond from which will lead a by-pass canal 6½ miles in length, 265 feet in width at the surface, and tapering down to 200 feet wide at the bottom, 16 feet below. Excavating the canal calls for removal of 5,500,000 cubic yards of earth.

Present Reservoir to Be Used
Through the canal, the flood waters of the river will go into the Big Eau Pleine reservoir now owned by the Wisconsin Valley improvement company, cooperative corporation of water power owners on the Wisconsin. It was completed in January, 1937, at a cost of over $800,000, privately financed. At the narrowest point in the divide between the Eau Pleines, a diversion tunnel 1,900 foot in length, 30 feet in finished diameter, will be bored.

In any year, the Little Eau Pleine river could not fill more than one-tenth of the reservoir to be created by the construction of the long earth fill and dam near its mouth on the west side of the Wisconsin. The engineers estimate that when completed the Little Eau Pleine reservoir will cover 35,000 acres which will make it one of the large inland bodies of water in this state. Close to 40,000 acres of land will be in the reservoir area. Water will be backed up a distance of 18 miles, the regular short line extending into Marathon, Portage and Wood counties, the westerly limits being not far from Marshfield in Wood county.

A short distance below the mouth of the Little Eau Pleine, and about 11 miles north of Stevens Point, will be constructed the first in a series of dams which constitute the major investment in this huge project. It will have a head of 25 feet and be of the usual reinforced type. Turbines will generate approximately 94,000,000 kilowatt-hours of firm power per year. River bed and banks at this point are of solid granite.

Water Flows Into Plant
This plant will be the first to receive the waters to be released by the reservoirs. The pond created in the Wisconsin by this dam will flood approximately 7,500 acres of river bottom land extending eight miles in Portage and Marathon counties. Total area will include 8,500 acres of publicly owned land. In the concrete spillway section of

MAP OF POWER DEVELOPMENT PLAN

The map above was prepared to show how the $26,000,000 sought from the Public Works administration for development of Wisconsin river and Fox river water power will be spent. The map includes the drainage basin of the two rivers and the Wolf river, shows the location of now existing dams and reservoirs, and the dams and reservoirs to be built.

It is proposed to aid waterpower in the Fox river valley by diverting up to 1,500 cubic feet of water per second from the Wisconsin river into the upper Fox river at Portage in times of low water in the lower Fox river. Huge reservoirs on the Wisconsin river north of Stevens Point will store great quantities of water in the spring for release during the summer, and dam at Portage will make it possible to send some of the Wisconsin river water into Lake Winnebago and then into the lower Fox.

This dam will be 11 gates, 30 feet in width and 18 feet high which will be operated by motor hoists. Engineers have regarded this power at Knowlton one of the most outstanding in the country and perhaps in the world. Its watershed is about 4,900 square miles and the reservoir system of the Valley Improvement company all lies above it.

Construction of Petenwell dam and the development of the big pond back of it will constitute the largest unit of the project. The dam will be built across the Wisconsin about one mile north of the bridge connecting Adams and Juneau counties at Petenwell rock. This power site is about 25 miles south of Wisconsin Rapids.

Little Floods
In all, the flowage above the dam will include about 19,000 acres of the 23,000 total acres included in this section of the project. Very little flooding of roads and bridges will result. Dikes will be built on both sides of the river and ripped up to confine the water. A sand foundation type of dam will be constructed, the same type used by the federal government for the dams in the upper Mississippi built to control navigation on that river.

Power output of this plant has been estimated at slightly over 100,000,000 kilowatt-hours per year of firm power and 26,000,000 kilowatt-hours of secondary power.

Germantown, the third unit of the hydro-electric system, will be built at Juneau county 18 miles south of Petenwell. The head of the power will be 28 feet and the water will back up a distance of 13½ miles making a pond of about 17,000 acres, with 21,000 acres in all required for the site. Thirteen flood gates, 30 feet wide and 18 deep and at 100,000 cubic feet per second capacity, will be operated by motor hoists, as at Petenwell. It has been estimated the plant will generate 78,000,000 kilowatt-hours of firm power per year.

Diversion Canal
The final phase of the project, estimated to cost about $1,000,000 is the diversion canal at Portage to take 1,500 cubic feet of water per second from the Wisconsin to the Fox river.

This canal will start at the levee on the east bank of the Wisconsin not far from the south limits of Portage, which gained its name from the Marquette-Jobet exploration. The canal will describe a semi-circular course and will enter the Fox at a point northeast of the east government locks of the old Portage boat canal. It will be slightly more than two miles in length and the average depth will be 7½ feet, 105 feet wide at the surface and 75 feet wide at the bottom. The water will be diverted at a time when it will be of maximum benefit to the lower Fox river industrial communities, now almost wholly dependent upon the government regulated water supply from the Winnebago pool. Water levels will thus be stabilized in the Winnebago pool and still allow for a greater release to the lower Fox extending from Neenah to Green Bay.

Year's Work
The project will take about a year to complete. It will include besides the canal with two intake gates at the levee, each 30 feet wide, channel improvement below the point where the canal enters the upper Fox and the construction of two highway and two railroad bridges.

The Knowlton, Petenwell and Germantown power plants and the diversion of water to the Fox river is all made possible by the construction of the Little Eau Pleine reservoir, and its connection with the Big Eau Pleine reservoir. The two will jointly impound the flood waters of the Wisconsin river watershed not now held in the run-off periods at the headwaters and in the reservoir system in the northern part of the state.

United States government figures indicate that there is available for storage above the Mosinee dam an average of 35,000,000,000 cubic feet of water annually, which heretofore virtually escaped in the spring and fall floods. The Big Eau Pleine reservoir now impounds about 4,000,000,000 cubic feet but this enters the Wisconsin river below the Mosinee dam. The Little Eau Pleine reservoir has an estimated average capacity of 25,000,000,000 cubic feet and thus five-sevenths of the now wasted water resource will be stored for river stabilization and power production purposes of both the Fox and Wisconsin rivers.

Brews Will Meet New London Team In League Battle

Kaukauna Squad Must Win Tonight to Hold Third Place in Standings

Kaukauna — Manager Wally Kilgas will send his revamped lineup of five of the 'old guard' and four Fox River Valley league players after their second win tonight as the Mellow Brews clash with the New London High Lions, Sunday at Manitowish. The Brews won their first start under Kilgas direction, taking a 3 to 2 decision with Dick Weisberger dealing out only one hit.

The Kaws are out for third place in the second half race, while New London is but a step away from the cellar in the seventh notch. The Brews must win tonight to go into third by themselves, provided the Two Rivers team can whip Kimberly, now sharing the spot with Kaukauna.

Two of the team's best all-around players, Oshkosh Waukegan and the Green Bay girls, will meet at 7:30 for a double-header attraction. The Oshkosh girls haven't lost a game all year, and the Green Bay team is tops in the Valley league.

Two Motorists Fined In Kaukauna Courts

Kaukauna—Two men paid fines in Kaukauna courts yesterday for traffic offenses, one charged with reckless driving and one with failure to stop for an arterial.

B. F. Bower, Chicago, was fined $5 and costs before Justice Barney J. Mutchka on the reckless driving charge, and Iden Larson, route 4, Appleton, was fined $1 and costs on the arterial offense. Both were arrested Sunday by Kaukauna police.

City Council Will Approve WDA Plan

Action on Resolution Will Be Taken at August 23 Meeting

Kaukauna—A resolution expressing approval of the proposed $26,000,000 Wisconsin flood control and power development program will be adopted by the common council at its August 23 meeting and forwarded to state and national officials. The council voted to have such a resolution drawn at a special meeting last week.

Weisberger May Pitch

The same lineup which started against Manitowish last Sunday will again take the field tonight, according to Kilgas. Dick Weisberger may be on the mound, with Edgie Schuler and Ray Dierdrick on hand for relief. Schuler and Dierdrick started with the Valley league. In Dierdrick the Kaws have a man who should prove to be one of the most valuable in the loop. He not only pitches but plays any of the infield spots and performs acceptably behind the bat. Ben Peck will receive Weisberger's slants with Junior Martens his understudy.

Howard Radder will cover the initial sack, and bat in the cleanup slot. Radder had a perfect day Sunday, getting two for two. Joey Van Drasek at second, Joey Goetz at third and Carl Schuler at short round out the infield.

The project includes the building of huge reservoirs and the diversion of water from the Wisconsin river into the Fox river at Portage through a canal. It has been estimated that the power of plants along the Fox will be about doubled through the increased flow.

Kaukauna itself is going to build a new power house on the site of the former Patten Paper company, purchased last year. The purchase included the rights to 32 per cent of the water as it entered the pond above the government dam. A grant of $140,000 in WPA money has already been allocated, and a grant of $90,000 PWA assistance is pending.

WPA Crew Completes Work at Outagamie Mill

Kaukauna—The WPA crew which has been working on dismantling part of the Outagamie mill has been transferred to the sidewalk and curb job on Fifth street. The work at the mill, a preliminary to the power plant construction, has been finished.

a pre-season game. Whether it will be Weisberger or Jerome none will know until Kilgas' choice takes the mound.

The main attraction is slated for 8:30.

LaFollette to Address Annual Labor Day Picnic

Kaukauna—The pouring of concrete on the WPA job of putting a section of the canal wall back into place near the offices of the Thilmany Pulp and Paper company was slated to begin today. The wall, which formerly leaned about eighteen inches out over the water, has been pulled back into place, and concrete will be poured in front and in back of it. A 24-foot section of wall has been taken out, and will be replaced with new concrete.

Mark did the hurting for the winners while Frappo toiled on the mound for the Methodists. Lockyer handled Marks and Blonday caught for Frappo. Earl broke up a 1 to 1 tie in the third inning with a home run on a liner between center and right field.

Dog Pretends He's Been Hit by Auto, Then Ambles Away

New London—When a man bites a dog—that's news, but a New London dog has no desire to be bitten by a set of gentleman's molars, so he has his own method of creating news.

For the last three days a varicolored mongrel of unknown heritage or ownership has been taking his siesta in the street on the post office corner here, the busiest intersection in town.

The dog lounges on the city hall steps until traffic is at its height, then quietly rambles toward the center of the road, casually glances around and lies down upon the pavement simulating sleep. Naturally this strange action halts traffic and attracts the passersby who swarm around the sleeping dog believing it has been run over and making suggestions as to what ought to be done about the poor creature.

While the crowd grows larger and the arguments was stronger the dog doesn't move a muscle or bat an eyelash. Finally, as if bored with the whole procedure, the dog gets up and slowly walks away—over to the city hall steps as though waiting for another group of suckers.

WISCONSIN FARMERS TALK OF LABOR LAWS

After a packer's strike in Racine County that entailed considerable losses to farmers raising spinach and the subsequent strike of workers at the Richland Cooperative Creamery the Wisconsin Council of Agriculture, said to represent 80,000 Wisconsin farmers, drew up a protest against existing labor laws and conditions that is at least enlightening.
These farmers demand "equal rights with employees, to arbitration services of the Labor Board." Their experience with the Wagner Act and its stunted, double-jointed offspring called the Little Wagner Act, brought them to realize that although the laws are fair in handling labor certain rights now come to be called inalienable, they included certain paragraphs that have no relation to the workers of the state excepting to get them into a swamp hole and their employers with them.
The Council also demanded "impartial elections to determine bargaining rights of the organization asserting it represents a majority of workers." This, too, will come as a surprise to many farmers who haven't been close enough to the machinery of the National Labor Relations Board to see how a law can be turned into a racket as has the Wagner Law, and how even majorities of workers have been stripped and bluffed and bulldozed by those "who work not, neither do they spin."

These farmers likewise demand "legislative action to obtain enforcement of existing laws supposed to protect individuals in the use of private property." Notice the word "supposed," and remember that laws are quite worthless unless there is someone to enforce them and that when those who take an oath to high heaven neglect their duties, well, the farmers are willing to bite—who is going to enforce the laws? In addition the farmers demand "making labor organizations legally responsible for their acts," and suggest also that "parties to labor disputes post bonds to guarantee the fulfillment of agreements and reimbursement for overt acts." In other words the farmers want an agreement to be an agreement, and if someone breaks it they want to be reimbursed for damages. They see no means of becoming reimbursed excepting through bonds.
The Post-Crescent is not prepared to go that far with farmers' organizations. It fears that creating an immediate financial responsibility is likely to wreck the unions because of young bucks and old toughs whose conduct continues to be wild enough for the cowboy country.
Financial responsibility may come in time. It should not come now. Instead, give the men a chance to become used to the necessary discipline of organization control.
Neither should we miss the big rock for the grain of sand. The really important thing is to iron out controversies peacefully, lawfully, intelligently and with consideration for everyone's rights.
The Wagner law, and its scrawny Wisconsin by-product, were probably enacted with the votes of many legislators who looked upon them as improvements. But they contained villainous provisions that have set the country back. The most sardonic feature was in the declaration of purpose where it was said that the law was enacted to minimize strikes. And if that isn't a piece of apple pie let someone else tell one. The records show we have set new highs for dispute and disorder under this law.

Let us have the sort of amendments that aren't written by John L. Lewis, aren't created to penalize anyone and aren't set up to give a certain class of labor leader a chance to tell how he put something over as he lies abed until noon.
But it would be just as bad to go to the other extreme by making a liability upon the union for anything called by the farmers an overt act, for in the confusion of making sound organizations there is bound to be some disorder which the country can temporarily absorb if we are really making dependable headway.

THE FAVORITE IS SAVED

The wife of the defeated Kentucky candidate for the senate deplored "the $250,000,000 to $300,000,000 of federal funds" spent or promised in the campaign.
Mrs. Chandler is smarting under the whip of defeat. She perhaps belongs in the horse and buggy days. The country is in a new era. It is a glorious period, another Italian Renaissance.
A ruler cannot rule alone. It is hard to even run a lemonade stand without assistance. And Senator Barkley was the favorite of the White House. He was never known to cross a single wish or whim or purpose of the President. Honest correspondents said he was a slow moving man, and slower in thought. That is just the kind of a favorite a ruler needs.

In the old days, personified by that bony horse and rickety buggy, presidents picked brilliant men. They were always hard to manage because they weren't either slow of movement or of thought. But anyway that black era is behind us.
Paying out even the top estimate, 300 millions, for the return of Mr. Barkley must not be begrudged by the people. It looks like rather a staggering sum but it will give the boys down in Kentucky a chance to plate their guns with German silver and double their bets at the race tracks.

Those who cannot stop themselves from looking ahead and envisaging the difficulty of paying these seemingly enormous debts created for nothing but political purposes may take a tip from the Roosevelt family. Instead of bewailing the fate of your children a marriage alliance with about 10 million dollars might save the day, or will not the public wake up to the advantages of the insurance business?

Nevertheless, and right today, Governor Chandler deserves a place alongside of Flyer Corrigan. He backed 300 million dollars into the corner and very nearly kicked the stuffing out of it.
Sometimes we begin to wonder about the independence of these American people. They're not all being bought.

SCARCITY AND ABUNDANCE

Governor LaFollette in his Green Bay speech was kind enough to the President to state that there are "two conflicting points of view" concerning production—one, that it should be lessened, and the other, that it should be increased.

The Governor's method of dealing lightly, and even kindly, with one supporting an opposite view is to be commended but we think he is mistaken in declaring that there was ever any considerable part of our population so blind to reality as to wish for scarcity.

How can there be scarcity, for instance, of dairy products while there are millions of tables that only see butter, cheese and milk occasionally and then in small portions? Shall we strive for less cotton while millions are still wearing threadbare clothes or rags? Shall we turn the corn under lest we feed too many cattle and fatten them for tables that know not beef?

The idea is revolting to human nature. That land is happy where the harvests are bountiful and the good housewife's table groans under its load of pickles and preserves, of sausages and cakes, of jams and pies.

But the land that is stricken with misery is the one where gaunt starvation stalks about, its fleshless bones protruding through its thin garments, its fetid breath disclosing a stomach empty of everything but sour odors and rank memories.

When you find men elected to high office who support scarcity and frown upon the happy picture of bounteous contentment you are as safe as upon that ship of which the ancient mariner told his tale to the wedding guests, "A painted ship upon a painted ocean," rudderless and depending for its salvation upon the kindness of wind and wave and tide.

MILWAUKEE MIGHT LOOK AT TOLEDO

A committee at Milwaukee is working to prevent the flight of industry from Wisconsin. Some companies have quit. Some threaten to go. They blame conditions upon the Wagner Act. Some are closing and giving up the ghost saying it is impossible to continue when workers are making pests of themselves and an annoyance out of their work. Others claim they are going to such parts of the country as are so hostile to the Wagner Act that its racket features are not employed.

A good deal might be learned from Toledo. For Toledo was probably hit harder than any city in the country. And the confidence was knocked clear out of it. In the midst of strikes, lockouts, rioting and mobilization of national guardsmen some sane minds got together and created an Industrial Peace Board. It was influenced somewhat by the procedure adopted by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers who have maintained peace for a long time in the garment shops. The Board consisted of representatives selected by organized labor, employers and the impartial but very much interested public. Its duties were limited to discussion and conciliation, the effort to bring labor and capital together over a table rather than across a barricade. The result has been astonishingly good. The Board has been able to show the better way to recalcitrant employers and also to point out to workers the misleading information that may be employed upon them by someone who has an axe to grind.

Reports from Toledo are that industrial warfare has ceased. Plants are not retrenching upon their buildings or extensions. They are not shutting down or moving away. They are enlarging their space and their forces. New industries have come to the town of peace. The retail trade has expanded enormously.
And all because it was recognized that one of the most difficult problems of the day is the adjustment of relations between capital and labor, made increasingly difficult by a law in which the public interest was thrown to the wolves.

For the U. S. as a whole 56 per cent of the people live in towns and cities; in the South only about 33 per cent are city dwellers.

Dale Harrison's In Old New York

New York—I have just dined with Death. All around me in the cool half-light of the Hawaiian Room, men and women laughed and chatted and danced. They glided lightly in each other's arms, smiled into each other's faces, and did not know that Death strummed their accompaniment.

Just a moment before, with the members of the band—all Hawaiians—in their places, the maestro, Ray Kinney, had taken his place. In his hand was a telegram. With his arm raised to start the music, he tossed the message to Tommy Castro, player of the steel guitar.

The music began. The dancers pushed back from their tables and moved out upon the floor. The lights softened.

The fingers of Tommy Castro danced over the strings of his guitar. The telegram, unopened, was before him on his music rack.

The selection ended. In the brief pause between numbers, Tommy opened the envelope, unfolded the message, read it. The hands of the maestro lifted again. The music resumed.

The fingers of Tommy Castro strummed expertly as ever the strings of his steel guitar. Beautiful women whirled by in the arms of smiling men. Here for a few brief moments under the luna-like light and to the soft purr of sweet music, Life's griefs were forgotten.

Tommy Castro, a Hawaiian troubadour far from home, had looked upon dancers a thousand times, and the rich tones of his guitar had lent lightness to thousands of dancing feet. Always he had been happy.

But tonight, on the music rack in front of him, was a piece of paper. On it were four words—four words that had come by the magic of electricity many thousands of miles from his home in Hawaii.

Four words: "Your mother died today." His fingers played on, expertly, automatically.

How beautifully sentimental the Hawaiian is! On a recent evening in this same setting there was an exchange broadcast between the Ray Kinney orchestra and a band playing from the Royal Hawaiian Hotel in Honolulu. The three dancing girls who are a part of the Kinney organization stood in their grass skirt costumes listening raptly to every note that poured into the room from the loudspeakers. To them it wasn't just music; it was Hawaii—home—being brought by some great miracle to them.

Tears rolled unashamed down their brown cheeks. For a few precious moments they were not in the heart of New York; they were back in Hawaii—home, where men and women dance and sing because their hearts dance and sing.

The music died away. The cue came for the girls' appearance. They moved, sinuously on to the floor, their hips weaving in unison to the motions of the hula. In another moment their white teeth were gleaming in the familiar smiles. Tears were forgotten. Like gentle reeds their hearts bent back from Hawaii to Manhattan. They no longer wept for Hawaii. They were Hawaii.

To this same Hawaiian Room each Saturday afternoon for more than a year has come a woman alone. She is middle-aged and conservatively but richly groomed. Always she sits at the same table—a table for four directly adjoining the dance floor.

No one knows who she is. She smiles at the dancers and softly applauds the music. She dines leisurely and well.

Always it must be the same table for four. Watching her week after week, always the same, one comes at last to know that she isn't really dining by herself. With her are three others—three very dear memories. You feel that somehow the lives of all four are bound up in the languid allure of the Islands.

And you suddenly sense that the Woman Alone dines happiest, for her companions are Memories she loves—and memories can be the best friends of all.

Looking Backward

25 YEARS AGO

Wednesday, Aug. 13, 1913
Sons of Appleton Elks were learning to swim. The youths, ranging from 4 to 15 years, were taking weekly lessons in the tank at the clubhouse under the direction of Arthur Smith, one of the stewards.

The local crop outlook was good. The hay crop had been better and heavier than last and the weather was considered ideal. Oats and the second crop of clover was first class while an average yield was expected in corn.

College avenue was the scene of a lively run-away that morning when a team belonging to Hoffman Bros. bakers ran away through the business section of town.

10 YEARS AGO

Wednesday, Aug. 8, 1928
Fire of unknown origin, starting about 3 o'clock Wednesday morning, destroyed the dance pavilion and palm garden at High Cliff park, owned and operated by M. H. Nielsen, Kaukauna, causing a loss estimated at between $6,000 and $7,000. Several smaller buildings, including a warehouse, also were leveled.

A sum of $50,000 had been bequeathed by the late D. W. Bergstrom of Neenah to Theda Clark hospital. The amount was to be invested in a trust fund and the income to be used for general hospital purposes.

George Dame, county contact officer of the American Legion, was to speak on "County Contact Work" at the annual American Legion convention at Wausau Aug. 13, 14 and 15.

Improvement of the putting greens at Butte des Morts golf club by planting bent grass seed was to be undertaken at once, directors of the club decided at the meeting in the new clubhouse the previous evening.

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

COULD YOU?

It's easy enough to criticize. And snicker at the play as you view it. But watching the action before your eyes. Could you do it?

It's easy to laugh at the song that drifts through the radio as they "swing it." But I'm wondering, as that high note hits, Could you sing it?

It's easy to scoff at the written word. And the author who paused to indite it. But though it may smack of a phrase you've heard. Could you write it?

It's easy to tear the picture apart. And though it has many a flaw, it is something that sprang from the artist's heart! Could you draw it?

It's easy to watch the dream castle fall. If you aren't the fellow who willed it. But it isn't as simple, after all, To rebuild it!

A Bystander In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington—Often enough Washington simply skates over the surface of the struggle out in the bailiwicks between established industry and organized insight into deeper personal elements involved. Such a glimpse was given before the Senate civil liberties committee in a 10-minute debate between a somewhat diffident young minister from Youngstown, O., and the heads of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company, the principal industry of the town.

A majority of the spectators at these hearings on civil liberties are the so-called "young liberals," since the average Washingtonian, just like the average Atlantan or the average Down Easter, would prefer not to be bothered with thinking of labor matters. These young liberals, while labor-minded, are inclined to titter a bit flippantly when things connected with churches are mentioned.

Ranged around the table below Senator LaFollette's raised desk were three individuals, Frank Purnell, president of Youngstown Sheet and Tube; William B. Gillies, vice president, a solid, florid-faced fellow, and young Rev. Orville C. Jones, one-time minister of the Youngstown church to which Purnell belonged.

Parting Of Ways

Mr. Jones related that in 1935, when C.I.O. was seeking a foothold in the steel industry, the ministers of Youngstown were invited to a dinner given by "Sheet and Tube." Everybody in Youngstown familiarly refers to the company as "Sheet and Tube." Well, at this banquet, he said, Mr. Gillies asked the ministers to keep their parishioners out of the C.I.O. Some of the ministers, dependent for church funds upon "Sheet and Tube" officials among their congregation, felt it was a virtual "communist" Jones said.

He himself debated at the dinner with Mr. Gillies, and suggested that the whole industry would be better off with labor organized to bargain collectively. He seems almost to have been snuffed out at the banquet by Mr. Gillies' assertion that 30 years experience in steel gave him a better knowledge than the minister as to what was "good for the men."

Jones stated that his association with labor people began gradually to alienate from his congregation the officials of the company, including President Purnell. Even leading women of the church, he said, started injurious stories about him.

Sentiment: Both Sides

"What do you say to these things?" was the effect of the questions directed by Senator LaFollette at Purnell and Gillies.

Both officials denied bringing pressure against Jones. There was uttering among the spectators when Purnell conceded he had withdrawn from the church both his person and his financial support. Evening after evening, he said with glowing heat, the church, that he felt had been built for other purposes was made a meeting place for "known reds." The giggles increased. But they were stifled abruptly when Purnell, with a shade of fury in his tone, said:

"My father helped dig the cellar of that church. He has been a member of it for 60 years and is still a member."

Here was something of a different color. It was the reflection of a sentiment, a sentiment that seldom comes in Washington, even in momentary flashes. It made labor issue something more than a street corner scuffle between pickets and company police.

The young minister seemed to respect the sentiment behind Purnell's reaction as "perfectly natural and simple." And yet, he said, such an attitude by officials "amounts to such a spirit of selfishness that it expresses an independent judgment."

Mr. Jones finally resigned from that pulpit and moved to Cleveland. To remain, he said, would have harmed the church.

Personal sentiments like those usually are smothered in Washington under the windy economies involved.

It's Odd But It's Science

BY HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

New York—An industrial malingering who takes stints in order to collect compensation, can fool doctors, but he can't fool geometry.

The geometry snare is explained to the American Medical Association by Charles Murray Gratz, M.D., of Columbia University. The only tools are a yardstick, pencil, and grammar school skill in measuring angles.

In comes a patient alleging one leg shortened by industrial injury. It is not too difficult, Dr. Gratz says, for a person to limp realistically.

He has the patient lie down, both legs stiff, one flat on the table, the other lifted in the air. In this position the legs form a triangle. The distance between the two feet, while one is above the other, is the base.

The angles the legs respectively form with this base give the length of each leg.

What the malingeringer can't do under this test, is to shorten his leg twice in succession to exactly the same length. The angles are more accurate than his powers of deception.

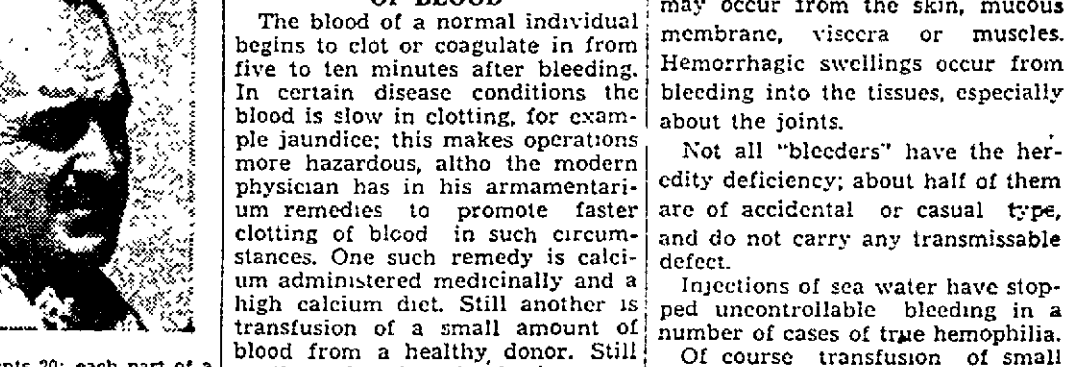

Likewise a stiff elbow or shoulder is found by measuring the angle while the patient is able to make drawing his hand upward behind his back. If he is faking he fails to

What Is Your News I. Q.?

Each question counts 20; each part of a two-part question, 10. A score of 60 is fair; 80 good. Answers on market place.

1. This man is a neighbor of President Roosevelt. What's his name? Why is he in the news?
2. What countries are members of the Balkan entente?
3. Puerto Rico has its own legislature, but its governor is appointed by the President of the United States. True or false?
4. Gandia and Gandesia figure in the news from Spain. Can you identify them?
5. Owen Wister, who died recently, was famous for what novel?

Your Birthday

"LEO"

If August 11 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m.; from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m.; from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m., and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m.

A protective instinct will make the average person do everything in their power to shield their loved ones from worries or harm today.

There will exist among many people, a spirit of selfishness that is bound to have a favorable reaction on conditions in general. A desire for bodily comfort may move you to take things very easy today, and tempt you to put off until tomorrow duties that ought not to be neglected, so be prepared to resist any such temptation. This is a good day to select for the discussion of preliminary details of any new plan or business proposition you might have under consideration.

You might have the vision today, to foresee the possibilities of some complicated situation arising. You can probably prevent this happening by taking the proper precautions. Married and engaged couples, and those whose minds are filled with thoughts of love, should remember it is not the value of a gift that counts as much as it is the sentiment that is back of it, and that it is not what you say, but how you say it, that really affects a person.

If a woman and August 11 is your birthday, you perhaps have many friendly rivals but very few enemies. Through being tactful you may win the admiration and respect of many people. You are probably very diplomatic, possess good business judgment and sufficient courage to enable you to stand up for your honest convictions. You might find men much easier to get along with than members of your own sex. Your personality ought to prove to be one of your greatest assets. Through teaching, lecturing, acting, singing, painting, or selling, you may find yourself well along the road that leads to success. Your matrimonial future seems to be assured.

The child born on August 11 is usually a talkative youngster, very fond of arguing. This youngster is possibly very much advanced for its years and has a mentality that is above the average child's. The expectations of children born on this date are generally fulfilled.

If a man and August 11 is your natal day, you might be very conservative, especially in business matters. You are, perhaps, very independent and very sensitive to criticism. Through agriculture, astronomy, mining, real estate developing, acting, writing, or preaching, you may make a remarkable and flattering name for yourself.

COAGULATION OR CLOTTING OF BLOOD

The blood of a normal individual begins to clot or coagulate in from five to ten minutes after bleeding. In certain disease conditions the blood is slow in clotting, for example jaundice; this makes operations more hazardous, altho the modern physician has in his armamentarium remedies to promote faster clotting of blood in such circumstances. One such remedy is calcium administered medicinally and a high calcium diet. Still another transfusion of a small amount of blood from a healthy donor. Still another is thromboplastin, prepared from brain tissue of the ox; cephalin is another name for this, when freshly prepared.

In any case where the clotting time is slow, it is good practice to take, say, a Calciwafer after each meal, three times a day, for several weeks prior to an operation. Calciwafer is as pleasant to eat as after-dinner mints; each wafer contains 9 grains of dicalcium phosphate, 6 grains of calcium gluconate, and 750 units of sunshine vitamin D.

Hemophilia is an inherited anomaly transmitted by females who themselves show no sign of the condition to males who suffer the effects of the deficiency. The inherent deficiency is lack of an element essential for clotting, precisely what element is not known. A male who is a "bleeder" (hemophilic) does not transmit the active bleeder state to his sons or daughters, but his daughters may carry the defect in latent form and some of the male children born to them are likely to be "bleeders."

In hemophilia serious or fatal hemorrhages occur after trifling injury, or spontaneous bleeding may occur from the skin, mucous membrane, viscera or muscles. Hemorrhagic swellings occur from bleeding into the tissues, especially about the joints.

Not all "bleeders" have the hereditary deficiency; about half of them are of accidental or casual type, and do not carry any transmissible defect.

Injections of sea water have stopped uncontrollable bleeding in a number of cases of true hemophilia. Of course transfusion of small amounts of normal blood is the best emergency remedy for uncontrollable bleeding in such a case.

To stop such bleeding from a tooth socket or from a tonsillectomy wound, the skillful application of diathermy (electro-desiccation) to the bleeding point is efficacious when ordinary medicinal and surgical measures fail.

Injection of clear blood serum (human serum or horse serum or rabbit serum), or even diphtheria antitoxin, is sometimes beneficial in prolonged bleeding in sporadic non-familial, non-hereditary hemophilia.

In one case of uncontrollable bleeding from a trifling wound on the head the bleeding was promptly stopped when a healthy person pricked his finger with a needle and allowed a few drops of blood to fall into the wound.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Twilight Passes
Hypodermic injections of a mixture of morphine and scopolamine to produce amnesia (forgetfulness) and analgesia (insensibility) became known and gained considerable popularity years ago as "twilight sleep." It was effective enough in producing the desirable amnesia and analgesia in the mother, but so often produced asphyxia in the infant that most physicians did not feel justified in using it. In a recent report by Dr. W. W. Bell of his experience with 225 cases of scopolamine amnesia and with 216 cases of sodium pentobarbital amnesia, for confinement, he concludes that the latter is as effective as scopolamine and far safer for mother and child. Pentobarbital sodium is otherwise known as sodium ethyl barbiturate and as nembutal, and is often given prior to anesthesia, or prior to local anesthesia for dental operation or administered only by a physician.

Question of Color
You claim that a child's coloring is never darker than that of either parent. Do you ever admit you're wrong? Two of our three children are olive skinned and dark haired and have dark brown eyes. Despite the fact that both my husband and I am fair skinned, light haired and blue eyed. (Mrs. H. E.)
Answer—I did not mean to say that. What I do say is that stories telling of the birth of a negro child to white or apparently white parents are myths; that if one parent has a fraction of negro blood or any negro features or a tinge of color in skin, the children will be darker than the darker parent. That is, not more negro in appearance.

New Varieties of Weeds Offer New Control Problem

Situation Becoming of Alarming Importance, Aamodt States

With all that has been said in the past about the necessity for weed killing, Wisconsin's real weed problems are just beginning.

This is the way O. S. Aamodt, state agronomist, views the situation. He finds that several new weeds, far more difficult to eradicate and control than the usual variety, are becoming of alarming importance to the state, according to a bulletin received by R. C. Swanson, county agricultural agent.

Among the weeds which are causing chief concern are the field bindweed, leafy spurge, Austrian cress, and perennial pepper grass. Patches of these have been reported in various sections of the state for a number of years where they continue to grow and spread every year.

The bindweed is often referred to as creeping Jenny, and small flowered morning glory. It is similar to the common wild morning glory in appearance except its leaves are smaller and are more pointed. The flowers are about an inch or an inch and a half in diameter and pinkish in color. It differs also from the common morning glory in that its root system may penetrate to depths of 25 or 30 feet in the soil. The only really effective method of eradication at the present time, according to Aamodt, is the use of chemical weed eradicators. Control appears possible with several successive crops of winter rye combined with thorough summer following between the time of harvest in July and reseeding in September.

Disease and Rain Combine to Check Grasshopper Plague

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison—A fungus disease which affects the breathing organs of the insects has practically removed the menace of the grasshoppers in the northeastern section of the state for this season, E. L. Chambers, state entomologist and commander in chief of the state's anti-grasshopper armies reported today.

Particularly in the vicinity of Shawano and Green Bay, Chambers said, has the fungus disease proven fatal to great hordes of the ravaging insects.

In the state as a whole, the recent rains have been a great boon in the grasshopper campaign, the state expert explained. Grasshoppers do not feed in damp or rainy weather.

Damages and the threat of damages for the balance of the season this year are considerably less than in 1937, he continued, probably due to the early start in the poison projects last spring. Thus far 24,000 tons of poison bait have been distributed.

Most heavily affected grasshopper areas at present are the northwestern counties, northward from Eau Claire. A chinch bug outbreak in Pierce county has been successfully overcome, Chambers reports.

Few Cattle Reacting To Tuberculin Tests

Only about a sixth of 1 per cent of the cattle tested in Wisconsin under the bovine tuberculosis eradication program during the last fiscal year were found to be reactors, the department of agriculture reports in a bulletin to R. C. Swanson, Outagamie county agricultural agent.

Fulfilling a systematic retest schedule carried on by the state and federal governments, the tests were applied to 1,327,843 cattle—the largest number given the tuberculin tests in any one year since the bovine tuberculosis control program was launched in Wisconsin.

The exact number of cattle reacting to the tests was 2,185, or .16 of one per cent.

Serious Outbreak Of Disease Among Horses Reported

Prevalence of "Sleeping Sickness" Expected for Another Month

Wisconsin is experiencing a severe outbreak of a disease commonly known among farmers as sleeping sickness of horses. It was disclosed today by Dr. W. Wisnicky, livestock sanitation director, in a bulletin to R. C. Swanson, county agricultural agent.

With the exception of eastern Lakeshore counties, the disease, technically known as encephalomyelitis, has spread over the entire state, Dr. Wisnicky said. At least 250 cases have been reported. Mortality among the afflicted horses is running between 40 and 50 per cent.

Because it is a seasonal disease, its occurrence was limited until the recent arrival of hot weather in this state.

The department is cooperating to the fullest extent with practicing veterinarians in coping with the extensive outbreak.

If sleeping sickness in horses is recognized early and called to the attention of a veterinarian there is a chance of saving the stricken animals, Dr. Wisnicky pointed out. He advised farmers to watch their horses every day and to summon a veterinarian in the event any abnormal health is observed.

Widespread prevalence of the disease is expected for another month.

Estimate Smaller Yield of Timothy, Clover This Year

Carryover From 1937 Will Provide Average Supply, Survey Shows

Production of white clover and timothy seed this year is expected to be much less than a year ago, according to the crop reporting service in a bulletin to R. C. Swanson, county agricultural agent.

The nation's production of timothy seed this year is expected to be less than half of last year, but the carryover from the 1937 crop is sufficient to provide about an average supply. Estimates for Wisconsin and the United States show a decrease in the acreage of timothy for seed as compared with a year ago.

For the nation, it is estimated that growers will harvest about 302,000 acres of timothy for seed this year, which is the second smallest acreage on record.

Last year Wisconsin growers harvested 11,700 acres of timothy for seed. The state's production for 1937 was reported at 41,000 bushels of seed.

Estimates for the United States show that the acreage of white clover for seed is much less than a year ago. In Louisiana, where most of the white clover seed is produced, the acreage is about two-thirds of that harvested last year, and the production this year is expected to be about 160,000 pounds compared with 300,000 pounds produced last year.

In addition to the decrease in acreage, the reduction in the white clover seed crop is due to an unfavorable growing season which caused a lower yield per acre.

Potato Motorcade and Residents of Waupaca Pay Tribute to John Jardine

Waupaca — The sun breaking through clouds after heavy showers, added to the impressiveness of the memorial service for the late John Franklin Jardine Tuesday afternoon at the grave in Lakeside cemetery. The annual Wisconsin Potato motorcade, Mayor I. B. Erikson and members of the city council, the Lions club and railroad men, with other citizens of the county, participated in paying tribute Mr. Jardine's record, as it related to the potato industry of Wisconsin, was outlined by J. G. Milward, secretary of the Wisconsin Potato Growers' association.

Mr. Jardine became president of the national association in 1932 and was unanimously reelected six consecutive times. He never missed a meeting and when potatoes came to the front in Washington early in 1935 he insisted that the association take a leading part. The potato act of 1935 was the result. While there were some things about the Warren act of which Mr. Jardine did not fully approve, he felt that it was a step in the right direction and that the good outweighed the bad.

National Group Formed

The national association was the outgrowth of a potato conference held in Chicago early in December of 1926. There Mr. Jardine was named by the conference as one of a committee of eighteen, representing the entire country for the purpose of welding the potato industry into a nationwide organization. This committee met in Chicago a few weeks later and organized the present National Potato association.

Insisting at all times that something must be done for the potato industry, when the marketing agreement program for 1937 was adopted in the northern and western states, Mr. Jardine was drafted as chairman of the Northern States Potato Control Committee, giving his services as long as he lived.

Mr. Jardine's death occurred Nov. 17, 1937, the day following a meeting which he addressed, of the Four-State Control committee, the agency embracing Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota and North Dakota.

In 1900 Mr. Jardine joined the late A. M. Penney in a potato wholesaling business, and at the time of his death was vice president of the Albert Miller company, Chicago, a wholesale potato distributing firm.

Prominent in City

Active in civic affairs, he was an alderman at 21, for the Second ward — the ward in which he lived his entire life. He was mayor of Waupaca at 30. For 10 years he was a member of the board of education, half of them as president. He was also a member of the Knights of Pythias, the Masons, Lions club and sportsmen's clubs.

For five years Mr. Jardine was a member of the state central committee of the Republican party. He was a candidate for congress, for secretary of state in 1934 and for state treasurer in 1936. He also was president of the Farmer's State bank, which he helped organize.

Represented on the program in the memorial service were the Rev. Hugh Misdall, Roy Holly, J. G. Milward, professor of horticulture, department of agriculture, University of Wisconsin, and Hugh B. Tabb, executive secretary of the National Potato association, who was unable to be present and was represented by Attorney Wendall McHenry, Waupaca.

Among those from a distance who attended the ceremonies were Dr. Theodore Dykstra, Washington, D. C.; J. W. Dunkel, Minneapolis; J. G. Milward, Robert Cressett, Cincinnati, and Gerald Boileau, Wausau.

Board of Health May Use Milk Inspectors

Madison — Inspectors of the department of agriculture and markets may be used to enforce state board of health regulations requiring sanitary production of fluid milk, cream, skimm milk and buttermilk, Attorney General Orland S. Loomis ruled today.

Dr. C. A. Harper informed the attorney general the board had under consideration regulations to prevent spread of communicable diseases, but that it had no enforcement staff.

Loomis said the departments may cooperate since sanitary milk regulations are by statute within the jurisdiction of both.

Need $15,000 to Finish Building By School Time

Board Faced With Alternative of Finishing Project With WPA Labor

Faced with the problem of securing an additional $15,000 to expedite construction work at the Carrie E. Morgan school with skilled labor or completing the job with WPA labor, the board of education at Lincoln school last night voted to continue on the present basis until the matter could be presented to the city administration.

A. James Lytle, Jr., supervisor of the WPA project covering remodeling of the old high school and grounds improvement at the new senior high school, presented a report showing the school board's $40,930 portion of the $81,769 project was already spent or would be expended in the purchase of materials contracted for under the original plan, the school board was to use its funds for materials and the government would supply funds for WPA labor. The school board, however, has paid $10,000 for skilled help which was hired to hasten work so that the building would be available at the opening of the academic year, Lytle said.

The supervisor estimated $15,000 would be needed to complete the project by Sept. 6 while the work could be done with WPA labor but the "school would not be ready until January." The orthopedic school, school for deaf, opportunity room, grade pupils of the second ward and administrative offices will be housed in the building.

Confer With Officials

"Completion of Morgan school and installation of service walks to the new school are the most pressing phases of the work," Lytle said. "Fennis courts, trunk sidewalks, the interior of the building, the athletic field at the new school could be done later with WPA crews for the board has $28,000 coming from the government which is earmarked for the WPA payroll," he explained.

A committee of the board was to confer with city officials today to determine whether funds could be obtained to wind up the job in time for the opening of school.

Equipment such as an elevator was not figured in the original estimate of the work at Morgan school and heating and ventilation far exceeded the anticipated cost because of the poor condition of the building, Lytle pointed out. When finished, the board will have practically a new school which will require little maintenance the next 25 years, he said.

Men are Appointed by Purdy, Chamber Head, And Benz, Chairman

Labor Must Run Its Own Affairs Fairly, Campbell's Warning

Stevens Point—W. J. Campbell, Republican candidate for United States senatorial nomination warned in an address here last night that "labor by voluntary action must run its affairs fairly" lest the nation "be carried to some such condition as carried Italy and Germany into autocracy."

"Labor has the right and should have," he said, "to organize and bargain collectively. But labor has a great lesson to learn. I learned it years ago in a law suit. It is this: You cannot bind and not be bound. Labor can't do it; the business man can't do it. Labor must rid itself of the labor racketeer. Labor must rid itself of the sit-down strike. Neither has any place in the American scheme of things."

Campbell declared "Wisconsin farmers have been sold down the river by the Washington brown trust."

Heil Favors More Vigorous Campaign To Attract Tourists

Two Rivers, Wis.—(AP)—Julius P. Heil of Milwaukee, candidate for governor on the Republican ticket, declared here last night he would institute a more vigorous campaign to advertise Wisconsin as a summer and winter playground in the event he is elected.

Heil told an open air rally that tourists bring millions of dollars into Wisconsin each year.

"In 1929, at the close of the year which marked the beginning of the present era of depression, official figures showed that tourists spent $134,670,470 in Wisconsin," he said. "That is business worth having. Wisconsin's beauty and scenic glory must be preserved at any cost."

The Milwaukee manufacturer is scheduled to speak today at Denmark, De Pere, Green Bay, Oconto, Peshigo and Marinette.

School Board Is Asked to Provide Bus for Students

Commissioners to Study Matter of Transportation to New School

Claiming students may miss valuable classroom time during inclement weather, a committee of the Fourth Ward Voters' league last night at the Lincoln school suggested the board of education provide means of transportation to and from the new senior high school during the academic year.

A. C. Rule, spokesman for the committee, said 87 Fourth ward students would attend high school next year and some lived as far as 5 miles from the new building. He said it was not the league's intent to tell the board what it should do but offered a bus as a practical solution to the problem.

Parents in other sections of the city may want the same accommodations and it is difficult to draw a line, Homer Benton, board member said. State law requires the board to provide transportation for those living beyond a 4-mile radius but it is not clear whether the board would be within its rights to spend taxpayers' money to provide such facilities for those residing within a 4-mile radius, he said.

A committee of the board will be appointed to study the matter.

Resignations of Miss Wilma Stevenson, kindergarten director at Jefferson school, and Miss Marion L. Uebele, first grade teacher at Edison school, were accepted. Miss Stevenson is to teach at Greendale, federal housing project near Milwaukee, and Miss Uebele is to be married.

Three new teachers were engaged to fill vacancies. They are Beth Petters, Janesville, Appleton High school graduate and Oshkosh Teachers college graduate; Kathryn Arnold, Milwaukee, Milwaukee State Teachers college graduate; Dorothy Schoengarth, Granton, Wis. Milwaukee State Teachers college graduate.

Vote on Building Inspector Before Council Tonight

May Result in Another Stalemate; List of Applicants Now at 27

Unless somebody has changed his mind, the city council may compete in another "ballotathon" in its meeting at 7:30 tonight in city hall.

A week ago the council took 87 formal ballots on the matter of selecting a building inspector and then went home with the office still vacant.

The alderman will start all over again when they convene this evening. The two favorites, according to last week's trend, are Carl Smith, 512 N. Appleton street, who consistently received from four to six votes on each of the numerous ballots, and Thomas J. Arbogast, 1015 W. Spencer street, who counted from three to five tallies each time.

The situation was made more complex yesterday with the entrance of two more men into the field. Applications for the office of building inspector were received by City Clerk Carl Becher from Joseph Kohl, 1513 W. Summer street, and Edward F. Rammer, 40 N. Sherman place. The number of applicants now stands at 27.

The final public hearing on assessments for paving of three streets in the Fourth ward will be conducted at the meeting. Assessments on the streets are: $172 per foot on E. South River street from Oneida to Lawe street; $170 per foot on E. John street from Walter to South River street; and $168 per foot on Fremont street from Oneida to Carpenter street.

New London, singing and dancing group will appear by popular request. In case of rain the program will be held in the pavilion.

Lutzke when he tried to enter her bedroom at night.

The defendant, recalled to the stand today, denied her mother-in-law's testimony.

Yesterday Mrs. Lutzke said her husband had threatened and abused her many times prior to the shooting, once telling her: "I hope you die in childbirth."

On July 24, 1937, her husband threw her down, stamped with his feet on her head until she was unconscious, Mrs. Lutzke testified, and then said after she came to: "Aren't you glad yet?"

Mrs. Lutzke stated that on the day of the shooting her husband drove her and their son to the lonely lovers' lane road near town and pointed a gun at her, saying: "Here's what's going to make you talk."

The woman related: "I grabbed for the gun and hung on it with both hands. We fell. He was choking me with one hand. I don't recall how I held the gun when I got up. After the shot the gun was at my shoulder. I picked up the gun, still deathly scared because I didn't know what he might do. The only thing he said was 'quick call somebody.'"

Mrs. Lutzke testified the shooting had been preceded by an argument which resulted when a tavernkeeper asked her if he hadn't seen her somewhere before.

Horse Races to be Among Features of Brown County Fair

Annual Event Will Open Thursday Evening, Continue Through Monday

Several Grand Circuit performers are among the horses which will compete in the harness races of the Brown county fair which will open at the W. DePere fair grounds Thursday and continue through Monday. Nine events will be held, three each racing day for purses of $250 and added money of the starters.

The harness races will be but one feature of the fair which has established an outstanding record for its fine livestock exhibitions. All of the barns are in better condition than they have been in a long time. In them the visitor will find the aristocrats of farm stock, whether it be horses, cattle, sheep, poultry or swine.

William Klaus, secretary of the Brown County Agricultural and Fair association, states that the free attractions, through the exhibits by Brown county residents, will be offered by 15 departments.

"If the enthusiasm of the fair officials, and the work they have put in can be any indication, there need be little doubt that the fair is going over all right this year," he said. "Chances are unless bad weather interferes, that attendance records will be broken."

Booster Night

Booster night will be observed on Thursday evening and there will be no gate charge. "Cavalcade of Hits" and seven vaudeville acts will be shown. The midway, which will feature 10 rides, 10 shows and other concessions, will be open, and there will be free dancing in the pavilion.

Judging of exhibits will start at 9 o'clock Friday morning. Exhibit buildings will open at 10 o'clock. There will be a band concert, three horse races and seven vaudeville acts in the afternoon. Nickel day for children will be held. A musical revue and band concert will be presented in the evening.

The livestock parade will be held at 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon. There will be music by the Green Bay City band, horse races and vaudeville acts. The evening will feature additional vaudeville acts and band concert.

Selection of a dairy queen will take place at 10 o'clock Monday morning. Bicycle races will be held in the afternoon. A state-wide horse pulling contest will be held at 2:30. Crowning of the dairy queen will take place at 7:30 in the evening following a band concert. The usual evening entertainment will be provided.

There Are Better Toys Than Guns, Patri Says

BY ANGELO PATRI
I do not like to see children playing with pistols and guns. These are toys that make crime a game for little children. When a three year old child holds his little pistol against the chest of his playmate and snaps it, and his friend falls "dead," isn't he playing Crime? And would anybody in his senses approve that idea?
I am realistic enough to know that we have to have guns and ammunition for the protection of society. But that function belongs to men trained for the service, and certainly not to children. And men trained to protect society do not hold guns against the bodies of citizens and murder them in cold blood. That is entirely the method of criminals, enemies of society.
There is nothing funny, to me, in murder or the thought of murder. I'm against games that make murder a joke, even when grown people play them. They are old enough to know better. I am against any toy or any game that lets children believe, for a single minute of their lives, that killing is a lark and murder a joke.
If you think this is taking a toy too seriously, I must point to the murders committed by young people scarcely out of their teens, to children killed by their playmates who handled guns they did not understand, or which they thought were not loaded. If these children had been taught from boyhood on that a gun was an awful instrument, that it dealt with death, I believe that youthful murderers would be fewer than they are, and that accidents to children would be considerably fewer than they have been recently.
Death is a fact of life to be sure, but it is a finality beyond which a human being cannot look. It has implications that a human being dreads. It is concerned with forces that none of us understands and before which all of us must stand in awe and reverence. To make a game of any such matter is about as stupid a mistake as we are capable of making.
I am not asking for a law against

Explains Way To Establish Diamond Suit

"Dear Mr. Culbertson: Speaking of a passion for finessing (which you often do), take a look at what a partner did to me last night! Of course, I may have been to blame, also, for having permitted him to become declarer. This was the hand:

"The bidding:
North East South West
1 diamond Pass 1 no trump Pass
2 no trump Pass Pass
"I was North and fully realized that my five and a half honor tricks exceeded my losers, but since my suit was a minor and the hand looked far from "gamist" unless partner could respond to a one bid, it seemed to me that a two bid, which would force a game, was inadvisable. After partner responded with a no trump I still felt doubtful about making five diamonds and, right or wrong, decided that three no trump would have a better chance.
"West opened the jack of clubs, upon which East played the deuce. Dear partner gazed hungrily at my diamond four and with scarcely any thought, entered his own hand with the heart ace. East played the nine spot and West, after much thought, put on his heart king. The diamond finesse worked all right but, of course, the suit still had to be cleared. West won the third round and returned a heart. East, chuckling like an idiot, cashed in four heart tricks, and we were down one.
"When I tried to explain to my ducky partner that he should not have risked taking out the heart ace in order to lead the first diamond toward dummy, he looked at me with a blank expression. Obviously, a low diamond lead from dummy and subsequently a finesse up to the ace-queen would have given us five diamonds, two spades, one heart, and at least two clubs, even if declarer failed to make his club queen. Yours truly,
"L. M. J. Toledo, O."

My correspondent's point about the play is well taken, although he failed to give credit to the defense, particularly West. The latter's action in dropping the heart king under the ace was a splendid bit of imagination. Without that play the heart suit would have been blocked and declarer's folly would not have come to light.
Incidentally, it might be observed that declarer could have fulfilled his contract, even in the manner he selected, if he had held up the heart ace for one round.
But the real error was in the method of attacking the diamond suit. The proper play, after winning the first trick, was to lead a low diamond away from the ace-point. Then, if the opponents removed declarer's heart stopper, he would be in a position to take a finesse to dummy's ace-queen of diamonds and might reasonably hope to run the rest of the suit. (Obviously, if either defender had two diamond stoppers there was nothing to be done about it.)
This type of preliminary establishment play is not widely known, but that does not make it any the less valuable.
As to the bidding, I agree with North's feeling about three no trump being a better chance than five diamonds, but I disagree on the point of the opening bid. North's hand was well worth an opening two bid.

Probably the best plant to grow under a large tree is the periwinkle, which thrives in shady situations and makes an attractive appearance throughout the year. If this plant is used, the space under the tree to be covered should be carefully forked over and enriched with well rotted stable manure and if a dressing of fresh soil can be added it will greatly improve the bed.

Famous Airplane Flights

III—THREE "LOVE EAGLES"
It may not be a wise thing for a pilot to cross the ocean alone, but there is something which makes many persons "rise up and cheer" whenever the deed is done.
After Lindbergh landed in Paris, he won world-wide fame. He also made people more interested in aviation.
Another lone eagle was a woman—Amelia Earhart. In 1932 she flew a monoplane from Newfoundland to Ireland. She was greeted by cheering throngs, and people were glad to see such courage and skill in a woman pilot.
Last year the world sorrowed for Amelia. In the course of a round-the-world journey, she was lost in the South Pacific. Her sunny smile and friendly ways have given us happy memories of her—and perhaps these memories are as important as the things she did.
A few weeks ago, a smiling American Irishman bobbed up in Ireland. Yes, his name was Corrigan! He had flown from New York to Ireland "by mistake," he said—having aimed for California and hit Ireland! One reason people became excited about his trip was because he used a nine-year-old airplane. Another reason was that he had flown alone and—like Lindbergh and Amelia Earhart—had become a lone eagle.

Beauty and You

by PATRICIA LINDSAY

By PATRICIA LINDSAY
Summer is a splendid time to learn to relax. Have you ever visited in the tropics? Did you feel slow and stupid? The natives moved and worked? It may have irritated you of northern breed. But I hope you also noticed the natives easy swing in movement and their disarming poise!
If you are the nervous, high-strung type of individual, why not learn this summer to relax your way to poise. Take things easy. Rest. Exercise to relax only. Stop worrying.
Cure Your Insomnia
It is never the thoroughly relaxed person who suffers from insomnia. Lack of sleep is usually a symptom of a harried mind or a nervous disorder. Much can be done to overcome insomnia.
In the first place if you are over thirty you can do with as little as six hours of sleep during the hot weather. Under thirty requires eight hours at least. So don't begin to worry if you cannot sleep nine and ten hours without waking.
Regular sleeping hours are quite necessary. Make it a habit to retire the same hour and to arise the same hour until you are relaxed.
Do not overeat or eat too fast. Both are likely to give you restless nights. You can skip a meal a day if you wish. Or substitute for two meals each day, a glass of milk every four hours and glasses of fruit juices in between.
Do not resort to nerve sedatives unless your physician advises them for you.
Sleep alone.
Ease Your Mind
During all your waking hours make every effort to stop worrying. Any woman's poise is destroyed completely by worry. Nervous little gestures develop and other distracting habits, such as eye twitching and little constant coughings. Nothing is so ominous as we imagine it to be. Just face it out—shrug your shoulders and let time do the rest!

Old Gardener Says:

Gardens need water and as a rule water must be given through a hose. Now a hose costs too much to be abused and deserves good care. It may be a one-play or a two-play or a three-play hose, according to the number of rubber layers built into it. The first named is strong enough for average garden use, but a two-play hose will resist kinks better. There are different sizes but the kind with a five-eighths inch diameter is the most satisfactory for garden use. It should not be permitted to remain kinked, especially when water is running through it. It should not be left full of water in the hot sun. It should be rolled on a reel when not in use. It should be thoroughly dried in the autumn, so that no water will freeze in it, and should be stored where nothing will be piled upon it. These items kept in mind will do much to add to the normal life of the family hose.

Sweethearts, Wives Are Vastly Different to Men

BY DOROTHY DIX
A bride—and a Hollywood bride at that—announces that she has found the secret that her sister women have been seeking throughout the ages with tears and prayers and with little success to boast of, and that is how to hold a husband and keep him in love with her.
She asserts she is going to turn the trick by simply being herself. "My husband fell in love with me just as I am," she says, "so evidently I possess the qualities he admires most in women and desires in a wife. Therefore, if I am satisfactory to him now, why should I try to change in any way?"
Why, indeed, except that men change their feminine ideals as often as they do their shirts. The charms and graces that intrigue them today will get on their nerves tomorrow, and the only thing to which they are really constant is change.
Besides, sweethearts are one thing and wives are another. The very thing that a man married a girl for he doesn't want her to do or be after marriage. He has an entirely different standard of virtues and conduct for before and after the wedding. That is what makes getting married such a risky undertaking for a girl. She doesn't know where she stands, nor what is expected of her.
In the days of courtship a man puts a girl up on a pedestal and burns incense before her. He lavishes flowers and gifts that he can't afford upon her. He tells her that her lily-white hands shall never do anything but soothe his fevered brow. He thinks it cute that she is such a nitwit that she thinks the shoulder. Dam is some sort of a new curse word. He compliments her new clothes and tells her what a dream she is in floating chiffons.
Naturally, the girl thinks that he has fallen in love with her because she is a glamour girl, and that all she has to do to keep him kneeling at her feet, holding her hand and making impassioned love to her is just to go on being glamorous and floating around in pink chiffons and talking baby talk.
Then, to her amazement and consternation, she finds that the very qualities he picked her out for are just the qualities he doesn't want in a wife. He blames her for not being something else than what she is, which is just as unreasonable as for a man to order omelette soufflé in a restaurant and then be peeved because it isn't roast beef. Most of the men who go around weeping on our shoulders because they are unhappy married and disappointed in their wives have only themselves to blame. The wives are just exactly what they were when their husbands chose them. Their only fault is that they were not magicians who could metamorphose themselves into entirely different kind of women after they were married.
Why otherwise intelligent men marry a woman for one thing and expect her to be something else can only be explained on the assumption that it is a merciful Providence's mysterious way of providing girls with husbands. Be that as it may, it is an indisputable fact that they do. All of us know highly educated, cultivated men to whom books are just as necessary as food who are married to Dumb Doras who never read anything but the society items in the newspapers, and who bore them to death. Yet these girls were just as illiterate at 20 as they are at 40 and just as incapable of carry on an interesting conversation.
We know poor men who married girls because they always looked like the last word in smartness and fashion, but who howl to Heaven over their wives' extravagance. We know men who married idle, useless little mamma's pets because they were so soft and kittenish and who complain because they have lazy slovens for wives who poison them on bad food. And we know men who fell in love with wild girls because they were so gay and vivacious and the life of the party, and who later consider themselves ill-used because their wives drag them out to night clubs and don't know how to make a home.
It is terribly discouraging, but it is true, that while a man's fancy before marriage may run to the parlor ornament sort of woman, after marriage he expects her to be a combined kitchen utensil and savings bank and entertainment committee. Hence the bride who thinks she can hold her husband by just being herself and staying as she was when he married her has another guess coming to her. The wife who keeps her husband has to be a lightning-change artist.

Good Taste Today

SATIN OR SOMETHING ELSE
Dear Mrs. Post: I have heard that satin is not suitable for an early morning bride's dress. I don't know whether you are supposed to have written this, or whether some one just told me, but in the event that satin is out of place, will you please suggest something else. I am being married in early fall.
Answer: There is no objection to a satin dress at no matter how early an hour in the morning. It should of course be very simply made and with a not too long train. Also it is possible that a light weight satin is less formal than a very heavy satin.
Mother's Wedding Dress
Dear Mrs. Post: My mother would like me to wear her wedding dress. It is one of the models of the early 1900's and not too good-looking. But for sentimental reasons I would like to wear it. I do hate, however, to ask my bridesmaids to pay for having similar dresses made for themselves, and would like to ask if their dresses must be the same as mine in type.
Answer: So many of the present-day fashions are reminiscent of those of 1900 that it should be very easy to find a today's model which looks perfectly well with your mother's dress. Or maybe your mother's dress could be altered slightly to conform with the other models. In any case, I agree that it would be unfair to ask the bridesmaids to get gresses that are not in style today.
The Meaning of "Immediate Family"
Dear Mrs. Post: Isn't a grandmother always considered "immediate family"? My granddaughter was married and the wedding so small that only immediate families of each were present. I feel, however, that a grandmother should certainly have come under this classification, and wish you would tell me.
Answer: I would certainly consider grandmothers (and grandfathers) as "immediate family." I can't understand leaving a grandmother out, even though her other sons and daughters who are uncles and aunts of the bride might have been omitted. On the other hand, "immediate family," strictly interpreted, does mean the family under one roof, and this is usually merely father and mother and their children, and not fathers or mothers, sisters or brothers of your parents. But under the circumstances of a wedding it would be cruel not to include grandparents unless there has been a family feud.

Be A Safe Driver

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP
If you are peppy and full of fun, men will invite you to dance and parties. BUT if you are cross, listless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls. When they go to parties they want girls along who are full of pep. So in case you need a good general system tonic, remember for 3 generations one woman has told you how to go "smiling thru" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps build up more physical resistance and thus aids in giving you more pep and lessens distress from female functional disorders. You'll find Pinkham's Compound WELL WORTH TRYING!

The Spanish Problem

Paris, Aug. 6. — Although the main point of danger in Europe is Czechoslovakia, the problem of Spain is almost as critical. It may be said that in the last analysis none of the several governments concerned has as yet been able to understand the problem well enough to make a policy that works. Thus far, every government has learned to its dismay that what is supposed to happen in the Spanish peninsula has, in fact, not happened. This is the only conclusion about Spain—that since 1935 Russia, Italy, Germany, Great Britain and France have found that their theories about Spain have been shattered by experience.

The civil war broke out two years ago, in July, 1936. It is, I think, reasonably well established that in the preceding year Russia believed that the Popular Front government in Spain was drifting rapidly to the left and that Spain was approaching the condition when a proletarian dictatorship would be feasible. The Spanish Republican propaganda today denies this, of course, but the available evidence shows, I think, that even if a Communist revolution was not imminent in 1936, there was at least an increasing disorder and a breaking down of the authority of the legally elected government. Where the Russians miscalculated was in thinking that this disintegration would lead to a Communist victory.

It led instead to a military counter-revolution assisted and perhaps even engineered from Rome and Berlin. But here again all the calculations were wrong. For there is no doubt that General Franco was supposed to seize the power as suddenly and as swiftly as Hitler and Mussolini had seized power, and that all opposition was to be overcome promptly by overwhelming military force and a reign of terror. General Franco and his backers did not expect and were not prepared for a civil war.

Civil War Put Nations In Awkward Positions
The unexpected civil war brought the Russians, the Italians and the Germans to the position where they had either to abandon their partisans in Spain or to help them at the risk of turning the Spanish civil war into an international war. At this point Britain and France had to take a hand in the matter, their object being to prevent the international war immediately and to prevent the Italians and Germans from establishing themselves permanently in Spain. To do this they devised the Non-Intervention committee. Its supporters call it a useful fiction; its critics call it a piece of blatant hypocrisy.

Whatever it is to be called, the effect of the Non-Intervention Committee has been to allow Italy and Germany to help General Franco so much that he has been able to take the offensive and conquer a large part of Spain, and yet allow Russia with some French assistance to help the Republicans enough to keep the resistance alive. So General Franco has been able to win battles but not to win the war. And as long as a substantial part of Spanish territory is not under his control, as long as there is in being another army and another government, General Franco's victorious battles bring him no nearer to a decision. For unless he can destroy all opposition in front of him, he is in continual danger of being overthrown by the suppressed opposition behind him.

Victory Calculation
Upset by the French
In the late winter of this year, however, sufficient supplies and troops had been furnished to General Franco to enable him to fight his way to the sea and cut the Republican resistance into two parts. At that point it was supposed not only in Rome but also in London that after all General Franco was about to win a decision. On this assumption Britain and Italy negotiated an agreement, Mussolini expecting to obtain the prestige of a quick victory. In Spain, Britain believing that when he had won General Franco would have to come to London for financial support.

But the calculation was upset by the French, who opened their frontiers and let the Republicans have enough munitions to keep them in the field for three months. With these munitions and with the Spanish Republican morale made firm by desperation, the victory that Mussolini expected General Franco to win has not been won. Moreover, in his effort to win a victory General Franco has taken military risks which might have proved to have been unjustified if the Spanish Republicans can obtain more weapons.

At the moment they cannot get many more weapons because the French have closed their frontier. But it is understood that if Mussolini should now try to intervene more strongly for General Franco, the French will again open their frontier. In short, the situation is one of deliberate and intended stalemate.

There are fairly good reasons for thinking that a military stalemate is just about what the British and French now think they want. For while sympathies are deeply divided in both countries, about the merits of the civil war, there is an approach to substantial agreement on certain fundamentals. The first is that the Republicans cannot reconquer Spain and that they could not govern it well if they did. The second is that if General Franco won he could not govern Spain with his own force and that he would have to depend upon the Germans and Italians. But since this would create a new hostile frontier for France and threaten the maritime communications of Britain and France, a victory for Franco is not desirable. The third is that a military stalemate offers the best chance of a constructive solution of the Spanish problem.

For once it was made clear to both sides in Spain that neither would be able to conquer the other, an armistice might be arranged. This would leave Spain with two governments, which might conceivably be persuaded to accept a federal solution, or if that is too complicated, at least to accept a truce. In either event the war could cease. In either event Spain would be neutralized because it would be too weak to take the offensive in case of a general European war. And if there is no general war a truce would give patriotic and moderate Spaniards a chance to assert themselves both in the Franco territories and in the Republican territories. For as long as the civil war continues no moderate or constructive action is possible on either side.

Over all this hangs a great and ominous doubt. It is whether a way can be found to make Mussolini feel that a military stalemate and a truce are consistent with the maintenance of his personal prestige. That is the most incalculable element in a situation which has been at all times so incalculable that every statesman who has tried to deal with it has burned his fingers.

WEDNESDAY NIGHT'S GAMES
Manitowoc at Green Bay.
New London at Kaukauna.
Two Rivers at Kimberly.THURSDAY NIGHT'S GAMES
Seymour at Clintonville.

THAT wild and interesting battle for the first three places in the Northern State Baseball league will be resumed with games tonight at Kaukauna and Kimberly and Thursday night at Clintonville.

Thursday night's game holds the most interest for it will feature Seymour, in first place with seven wins and one defeat, risking its lead at Clintonville. The Trunkers and Seymour were tied until last Sunday afternoon when Clintonville stumbled at Two Rivers.

Tonight's games will feature the Kaws battling New London and Kimberly playing host to Two Rivers.

GIRL SOFTBALLERS TO PLAY PRELIMINARY

Kaukauna — The Oskosh Winnebago girls softball team, an all-star aggregation and undefeated this season, will clash with the Green Bay girls softball team at 7:30 here tonight under the lights in the Kaukauna baseball park. The baseball game is scheduled at 8:30 or 8:45.

Kitty Klein will pitch for the Oskosh team with Val Dombroski tossing for the Green Bay aggregation. Miss Klein is considered an outstanding performer.

One admission will be charged for both games.

ers in games that mean a third place tie to the Fox valley clubs. Each has won four and lost three. They also have a postponed game to play.

Kaukauna's revised aggregation will have an opportunity to show the folks that Sunday's victory at Manitowoc wasn't a flash in the pan or the sweepings of a new brew. The Kaws team now is a combination of the Fox Valley and Northern State teams and shows all home talent except Pitcher Dick Weisgerber and Catcher Ben Peck.

Manager Wallie Kilgas of the Kaws probably will send Eddie Schuler to the mound tonight. The Combined Locks hurler should be ready to take his turn. Weisgerber having tossed Sunday. However, Schuler will be ready if Schuler finds the going tough.

Ben Peck will be behind the plate with Howie Rader at first, Vondrashek at second, Carl Schuler at short and Gertz at third. The outfield will show Busse in left, Kappell in center and Vils in right.

Manager Del Stacy of New London probably will name Marilyn Munch as his starting hurler who means the Wolf river team will be tough. He has turned in several top exhibitions this summer and is rated the star of the New London pitching platoon. Orin Krohn or Baldy Hawk will don the armor and big mitt.

Dobberstein will play second and lead off. Palmer will bat second and show in left field. Evan Vande Walle will bat third and play short in the Cliff Krohn perform at third. Westphal will be in right. Shortell at first and any one of several players in center.

KIMBERLY AT HOME

Kimberly—Kimberly Papermakers will get one of the hardest tests in weeks when they clash with the Two Rivers Icebergers here under lights tonight. Two Rivers is in fifth place in the standings, with four wins against four defeats. Kimberly has four wins against three defeats.

Santrock probably will draw the Two Rivers hurling nomination or it may be Roland Schnell, the lake shore team's man mountain. Lefty Andy Fortin is still another choice. The two southpaw hurling one or two games left in his system despite the fact he's been around a long, long time. Pupeter is expected to do the catching.

At first base, Two Rivers will have Stan Smogoleske and he will bat in a prominent spot. Second base will be taken care of by Jimmy Blue while Eddie Raab, the deceased manager of the team, probably will be at short and Maury Braut, another ex-manager, at third.

In the outfield Santrock will play left if he doesn't hurl. Meyer will be in center and Mike Muldowney probably will be in right depending on the kind of hurler Kimberly uses. The veteran still is death to certain kinds of tossing.

Manager Whitey Behrend's hurling selection is something of a puzzle. He has Dumke and Petty of the Eastern Wisconsin league on his roster and Arlie Hopkins, the most likely choices are Hopkins or Dumke, and if right they'll make it a real ball game.

Jack Lamers is the catching choice, as usual, Swen Bowman,

Chatter

THE ten-day suspension hung on Jake Powell, outfielder for the New York Yankees, for an indiscreet remark, and hardly intentional, over the radio last week and which was considered a slur on the Negro race, has brought a few scribbles to his defense. It is his contention that Powell's comment that in the off season he was a policeman and "hit niggers over the head," was hardly weighed in his reaction by a man who probably had never talked over the air before.

They also contend that Bob Elson, announcer for WGN, was more at fault than Powell, that he could have smoothed over the remark in a moment instead of diving into apologies which only made the matter worse. One of the papers coming to Powell's defense was the Davenport, Ia., Democrat and Leader which points out that Elson and Judge Landis, by their action, may have ruined Powell's baseball future.

The article from Davenport says in part: "Powell was indiscreet in his selection of ideas—he had no mimeographed copy to follow. He was asked a question and on the spur of the moment he answered. If he had had time to think over the question, weight the pros and cons, in all probability he might have given an entirely different answer. Immediately Bob Elson made a mountain out of a molehill instead of trying to cover up the man who was doing him a favor by submitting to the interview, he tossed him into the arena and let the lions come at him. Bob, in his desire to protect his station, made a monkey out of Powell, made him look as an individual who might be trying his best to incite a race riot."

"Then Saturday Landis took up the cause, salaamed in front of the colored race and put the Yankee player in the nine hole for sure, maybe for protection, we don't know, for the more the white officials kept on heaping the blame on Powell, the more the colored folks thought they had been done a terrific wrong."

"Possibly the episode will open a new avenue of thought in baseball. When the players are going through the spring training grind, it might be a good idea for the radio announcers to set up a school to teach the ball hawks what to say and what not to say in the interviews. They could list the questions under A. B. C. D. etc. and when the players had finished their work on the diamond, they could retire to their hotel rooms for the skull practice—it might be a good idea for Judge Landis to instruct the announcers to confine all their questions to the game of baseball, not to the likes and dislikes of players in their spare time. Then a diamond performer would not find himself behind the eight ball as Powell is today, carrying the load and taking abuse from white officials as well as colored folks."

This from John P. Carmichael of the Chicago Daily News:

When the Yanks are going along all right you can get many a chuckle out of Joe McCarthy and on the last swing west Joe was telling, one day, how the bench signals the bullpen, far out beyond the left-field foul line in Yank Stadium. They have a telephone connection from the dugout, but rarely use it. "We have signals," grinned Joe. "Last year, for instance, whenever we wanted Walter Brown, Fletcher (Yank coach) would spread his hands about a yard apart, to indicate to the 'pen' watchers Brown's broad back."

"If we wanted Pat Malone, Art would put both thumbs in his ears and flap his hands to illustrate a Zeppelin. . . that was Pat. Whenever we want Johnny Murphy, Fletcher stands up and strokes his chin. Murphy has a long chin and he knows that means him."

INDIANS SPLIT

St. Louis—(AP)—Earl Whitehill handuffed the St. Louis Browns with nine hits in the nightcap of a doubleheader yesterday giving the Cleveland Indians a split for their long day with an 8 to 1 victory. The Browns took the opener, 4 to 3.

It was a big, second inning, worth five runs and climaxed with Bruce Campbell's circuit smash with a mate on, that put the game on ice for Oscar Vitt's crew. Bill Cox, third of the Browns' moundsmen to see service, held the Indians in check until the eighth.

In the first game, Bob Feller was replaced by Denny Galehouse in the eighth after allowing two straight hits. Then the Browns hopped on Galehouse and Johnnie Humphries for three runs and the ball game.

Annual Invitational Tournament Scheduled Tomorrow

PLAN MANY PRIZES
Will Start Serving Lunch
At 11:30 and Dinner at 5:30

A special golf course that would delight the heart of Joe Cook will greet players attending the annual invitational tournament at Butte des Morts Golf club tomorrow. Billed as a side show to the main event, which will be run off over the regular 18 holes, the five hole special course boasts streamlined golf clubs, an opportunity to make a hole-in-one and other features, the exact nature of which have not yet been revealed by the committee in charge.

The prize committee yesterday wound up its purchases of items to be distributed both for golfing ability and good fellowship. Prizes also will be given for the special five hole course which, in addition, will have its own scorecard.

To facilitate the starting of four-somes off the first tee, a public address system is being set up and will be used to summon players from the club and reduce the confusion generally accompanying an event of this nature. The first players are expected to tee off shortly after 11:30 a. m., with lunch service being started at approximately 11 a. m. to accommodate the early arrivals.

Dinner will be served starting at 5:30 tomorrow afternoon and awarding of prizes is scheduled for 8 o'clock. There will be entertainment before and during dinner. Heavy rains last night left the course in excellent condition and helped raise the level of water in the creek that flows through the grounds.

Word was received that J. Smith Fenske, Chicago golfer who recently played 144 holes of golf in one day, will be unable to attend the tournament because of a function in his honor at Olympia Fields, Chicago. He wired his regrets yesterday.

Love on the Range

The Story So Far
A plot is on foot to smash the Rafter T, and "Blue" Ankrom takes a job there to help lovely Lee Trone. A man posing as a friend of the Trones is mysteriously shot. His accomplice, Betty, makes a play for Ankrom which puts him in bad with Lee. From Rafterford, the sheriff, Ankrom hears that Claydell, a neighboring rancher, is after the Trones' land because a railroad is going through. Ankrom shoots it out with a gang which has jumped the water tank. Lee follows him.

Chapter 23
Cutting Words
When Ankrom finally faced Lee his face was calm. "Get it over with," he said.
"Get what over with?"
"The remarks you've been saving up since that affair you misconstrued in the bunkhouse—the analysis of my character you've hit upon from observation of my conduct."
"Your conduct," she answered coolly, "is your own affair." And now her green eyes flashed. "But had you mentioned manners, I'd tell you frankly they're deplorable."
He doffed his hat in a mocking bow. Lee, he felt, not only regarded him as a liar, but as a man who readily unshucked his irons for pay. That she had some justification for such thoughts, made no difference — she had jumped to conclusions. Hadn't Betty's words proved this amply when she had passed on to him that day the condemnation she had heard from Lee's own lips?
"Since we're just a couple of redheads trying to be pleasant," he drawled, "I'd admire to remind you that we're not on a college campus here. This is the West — a place where men ain't never got accustomed to —" He let his voice trail off but made his meaning clear by the mockery with which he eyed her unconventional attire.
Lee jerked her silk dress over her knees. "Heaven knows why I should have stepped my hands in blood to save you from that lynx unhorn!" she said angrily. Ankrom closed the distance between them by one long stride. "What's that?"
"I should have let that Dreen snake kill you—the world would have been a finer place!"
Ankrom's thoughts were crazy. "Stepped my hands in blood?" "Should have let that Dreen snake kill you?" He did not hear the beat of approaching hoofs. He was staring at her blankly.
"What the hell you talkin' about?" He crossed to her horse with rapid stride. "What's this you're sayin' about Dreen?" He reared for the bridle but her loaded quirt struck down his hand, slashed him hard across the face.
"Don't touch me! Get away!" her voice was thick with suppressed emotion. "I killed Kelton Dreen!"
With a sob she whirled her horse and was gone.
She Loved Him
She had killed Kelton Dreen! The impact of that revelation struck Ankrom far harder than her whip had done. The significance of her act was suddenly all too plain—she had shot Dreen to save his life because she loved him! Under any other circumstance she would have shouted a warning; but she hadn't risked that chance. His life had meant too much!
It was very plain to Ankrom now that Lee had loved him. Her love—if not her trust of him—had withstood that bunkhouse scene, and her fear for his safety had brought her after him to this cabin in such vigorous hurry she had found no time to swap her dress for more suitable riding gear. He roared aloud.
A voice gasped behind him. "What's happened to the watergobblers?"
"I sent 'em packing!" Ankrom, after recognizing the newcomer for Ring-Legs, fell back in his pool of slum.
Ring-Legs shoved back his hat, ran a hand across his shiny dome as he looked about the clearing regretfully. "I don't reckon them coyotes left peacefully," he mused aloud, eyeing Ankrom hopefully. "Anyone get bad hurt?"
"I expect I hit two-three of 'em. Next trespasser you catch on Rafter T property you've got my permission to shoot. I'll be responsible. Get on back to the —" Ankrom broke off abruptly, said: "Never mind. Stay here an' see that nobody jumps this water!"
"Why—where you fingerin' to lead for?"
"I'm going to have a talk with Claydell," Ankrom said, and fed his buckskin steel!
Accusations
Claydell's ranch house was a rambling, single story affair with a thick sod roof and adobe walls that were tinted pink. Ankrom dismounted before the porch, dropped the buckskin's reins and strode within.
He found himself in a long, broad room that was neat and clean. Its walls were adorned with trophies, an Indian blanket or two, a mounted antelope head, a rack of rifles. Back of a desk beside a window Claydell was rising to his feet, an expression of polite wonder on his face.
"I'm Ankrom — foreman of the Rafter T."
Claydell was regarding him curiously. "Ankrom? Seems to me you're the chap who made Tom Rafterford back down over to the Trone place that night two weeks ago. Where you man who killed Sooms like I recollect your name was Streeter?"
Ankrom grinned coldly. "Your memory — good, Claydell. However I didn't ride way over here to entertain you."

Twin City Mills Offer Variety of Recognition To Long Service Employees

Menasha—Recognition of long service employees in large industrial plants in Neenah and Menasha, has been in existence for so many years that the program, unheralded and unsung, is only considered a "usual procedure" in the program of employee-company relationships.

Perhaps the longest years of service at any one company can be claimed by Fred Huband, 82, who is a director as well as an employee at Gilbert Paper company. Mr. Huband began his work with the Gilbert Paper plant Aug. 1, 1887 when he helped with the original construction of the mill. He worked up to plant superintendent and on to a directorship.

Henry Vander Linden, Menasha, has been an employee of the Menasha concern for 47 years but retired recently on a pension. Three employees have been in the service of the company over 40 years, 3 for 38 years, 2 for 26 years, 2 for 35 years, 1 for 30 years, 22 for 20 years and over 125 for 10 years and over.

Pension System

Recognition for long service employees covers a multitude of things at the Gilbert Paper company. When an employee serves 25 years, he is presented with a gold watch by the company. Fifteen or more persons have received such recognition gifts. Any employee who attains 70 years of age or who has 40 years of service on his record can be pensioned. Gilbert Paper company boasts that there never has been an employee who has taken care of his job that hasn't remained on the payroll in one way or another until he died. Under the company's death benefit plan, operated wholly within the company, employees contributing nothing, a program holds the consideration that if an employee should die from any cause other than injury, any beneficiary he may name will receive $1,000, providing the employee has been on the payroll of the company 10 years or more. Less than 10 years service entitles the beneficiary a proportionately smaller benefit.

Six brothers hold a record of 101 years service to July 1, 1938 in the Kimberly-Clark corporation, perhaps the most unique feature of long time service in any one company. The combined ages of the six men total 215 years, indicating that almost one-half of the combined years from their lives to date were spent in the employ of the Kimberly-Clark corporation. The oldest of the brothers is 44.

William Dupont, Kimberly, has been employed for 14 years and one month. Joseph Dupont, Kimberly, 19 years. Mathew Dupont, Kimberly, 9 years and 41 months. Harry Dupont, Neenah, 20 years and 3 months. Herman Dupont, Neenah, 20 years and 11 months. John Dupont, Niagara Falls, N. Y., 18 years and 10 months.

12 Work Over 40 Years

Thirteen employees of the Kimberly-Clark corporation have been in service 40 years or more, 62 have been employed between 30 and 39 years, 242 have been employed between 20 and 29 years and the number of employees who have been employed between 10 and 19 years inclusive is 1,079. The total number of employees who have been employed 10 years or more is 1,396.

F. J. Sensenbrenner, who is president of Kimberly-Clark corporation, will have been connected with the company 50 years next year. Fred Krahnhold who is a member of the operating staff at the plant, have been employed at Kimberly-Clark for 40 years or more. Others who are included among the 13 employees who have 40 years or more service in the corporation include Ernest Jenner, Charles Poppe, Chris Vander Velden, Joseph Van Roy, John Wachter, and Albert Gosha, all of Kimberly. Charles Jansen and William Nabbe, Niagara, Wis.; Herman Krenkel, Niagara Falls, N. Y.; Al Doran, Appleton; and Adolph Paulson, Badger-Globe mill, Neenah.

Recognition Gifts

Recognition gifts are given men at Kimberly-Clark in long service employees at anniversary dinners in honor of the men are held. The Kimberly-Clark corporation also has a comprehensive plan of pensions for its employees.

Charles Friedland, Nicolet boulevard, who remembers the day when teamsters were men and acted like it, has 64 years of service at the Menasha Wooden Ware plant to his record. Mr. Friedland started working in the woods and later was foreman of the bars which at one time produced were the Menasha library now stands.

Other men at the Menasha Wooden Ware who have been employed for 50 years include Henry Boehnlein, Arthur Phillips, Philip Knobel, John Remmel, John Omacinski, St. Tony Lutzelski, and William Abner. Those who have been employed for 35 years and over are John Zolkowski, Clarence Tuchscherer, John Eckrich and August Rhode. A large number of men have been in the service for more than 20 years. The Menasha Wooden Ware itself has been established for more than 20 years.

EMPLOYEE 51 YEARS

Fred Huband, 82, above, who helped build the original mill of the Gilbert Paper company, still is an employee of the plant. Mr. Huband began work for the company Aug. 1, 1887 and worked up to plant superintendent and on to a directorship.

Falcons to Open Series With Cabs For League Title

Menasha Team Will Meet Oshkosh on Neenah Diamond Sunday Morning

Menasha—The Polish Falcons baseball team will open its bid for the Fox Valley Baseball league championship Sunday when the Oshkosh Cabs, winners of the first half title, will tangle with the Falcons at 10 o'clock at the Washington park diamond in Neenah. The time and place for the game were set by Glen Miller, Kaukauna, president of the league. The Menasha grandstand is still under construction, and will be ready for no games this season.

The second game of the series will be played Sunday, Aug. 21, at Oshkosh while the third game, if necessary, will be played in the city having the larger crowd in the first two games. In addition to the league championship, the two teams will be battling for the right to enter the state tournament at Milwaukee, Sept. 4 to 12.

The Falcons annexed the second half league title with a record of seven straight wins in which the hurling of George Kosloski, coupled with his own hitting as well as that of his brother Herbert and Badger Nadolny, were the prime factors. During the season Kosloski tossed a no-hitter, two one-hit games and several others in which the opponents connected safely only a few times.

10 Straight Wins

The Falcons won their last three games in the first round and now have a record of 10 straight wins. During the season they have won 11 and lost three. The team broke even in two regular league games with Oshkosh. They lost the first one by a 16 to 5 score before Kosloski took over the pitching. They won the second game, with Kosloski scoring a 5 to 0 shutout.

The Oshkosh team won six of seven games to take the first half title but in the second half the Cabs won only a single game for a season mark of seven wins and seven defeats in the league. Neither team has participated in the state tournament before.

The Falcons will be counting on the hurling of Kosloski to turn the championship their way. Oshkosh plans to have three hurlers available to stop the Falcon sluggers. They are Frank Kloiber, probable starter, Herb Muegeraer and Frank Wilson. In addition the Cabs will work with three possible receivers this week, "Hoop" Muegeraer, Jake Dobish and Bob Roth. The team probably will be bolstered by the return of Mert Tyvner, fielding first baseman who also poles out long hits.

Chicago Youth Is Third Drowning Victim in 5 Days

Howard Jacobson, 15, Loses Life Tuesday Afternoon in Fox River

Menasha—The third drowning in Menasha within five days occurred at 2:30 Tuesday afternoon when Howard Jacobson, 15, 225 Warren boulevard, Chicago, lost his life while swimming in the Fox river off the end of DePere street. Joseph Skibba, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Skibba, 209 Elm street, and Kenneth Johnson, 9, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Johnson, 373 Oak street, were the other two victims. They were drowned while swimming about 100 feet off shore in Lake Winnebago last Friday afternoon.

Howard, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Jacobson who was vacationing with his aunt, Mrs. Anna Taves, 717 Paris street, was swimming with Lillian O'Brien, Virginia Funk, Wilbur Schaefer, Isabel Mass, Regina Rauch and Alvin Rausch all several years younger than he was. He was not a strong swimmer and apparently got beyond his depth.

In Water Short Time

When he went down, he pulled Lillian O'Brien with him but she managed to escape. The cries of the children attracted the attention of Norbert Versteeg, Little Chute, who was on the opposite shore of the river. Versteeg started to swim to the youth's assistance and was picked up by Carl Oederman, Menasha High school student, in a boat. The two recovered the body after it had been in the water less than 10 minutes, just a few yards off-shore.

Members of the Menasha fire and police departments and Dr. F. G. Jensen had been summoned. Dr. Jensen applied artificial respiration while the firemen operated the oxygen inhalator. The attempt to resuscitate the lad was continued for nearly an hour before Dr. G. A. Steele, Winnebago county coroner, pronounced him dead.

Fourth This Summer

The drowning is the fourth to occur in Menasha this summer. In addition to the two boys who were drowned last Friday, Gordon Stove, 23 Oshkosh, was drowned May 21 when the skiff he was towing went over the dam in the Fox river near the Mill street bridge. There have also been several narrow escapes from drowning.

Howard was born Aug. 11, 1922, in Milwaukee and lived in Chicago for 15 years. He was a student at Marshall High school there. Survivors are the parents and one brother, Leslie.

The body was taken to the Lammert's Funeral home, will be held tonight and will be taken to Chicago for funeral services Thursday morning.

Winnebago Players Cast Responds to Four Curtain Calls at First Performance

BY CHARLOTTE MCINTYRE
Menasha With approximately two short weeks to whip into shape a difficult production for amateurs, director Maurice Hunt and his cast deserved every one of the four curtain calls and more that ended the first performance of "Dinner at Eight," the Winnebago Players summer presentation, at the Menasha High school auditorium Wednesday night. The final performance will be presented at 8:15 this evening.

Excellent characterization by practically the entire cast culminated in bringing out the rich ironic comedy intended by the authors.

Laurels must necessarily go to Maurice Hunt, who carried the heavier role in the play that of Larry Renault, a desperate, degenerate actor on the way out but too proud to admit it and too egotistical to accept it. Hunt's portrayal of Renault's final scene as he plays his swan song as a suicide, depended entirely upon pantomime, and it was handled with brief effectiveness that was flawless.

Susan Beals, cast in the role of Dora, the Jordan maid, deserves considerable credit for her fine characterization of the bewildered gentle girl in love with Gustav the cosmopolitan butler. Nathan Wauda as Gustav gave a good performance although his portrayal of the love scenes with Dora were at times unconvincing.

Jung Is Effective

Another heavy part was that of Oliver Jordan, the business man, harassed by efforts to keep his business together and the knowledge that he was seriously ill, which Henry Jung, veteran of Winnebago Players productions, handled with ease and commendable characterization. Jung drew an appreciative chuckle from his audience when he included them all in presenting one line, "It is rather warm in here."

Joan McGillan Hoffman, Appleton, as Kitty Packard, the wife of the boisterous diamond in the rough westerner, made the most of her lines which were packed with ironic humor, and her pantomime was exceptional.

Betty Borenz as Mrs. Wendel, the cook, took a small part and made it outstanding with a splendid performance. Her scene with Mrs. Jordan as she tells her what became of the lobster aspic was excellent.

Good Performance

Mrs. D. W. Bergstrom in the role of Mrs. Talbot, the society's doctor wife, gave a good performance of a human understanding individual who was the only character in the entire play who had achieved a measure of happiness even though it was bitterly earned and could not be depended upon to last. However, credit is due Mrs. Bergstrom for presenting to her audience that feeling.

As Hattie Loomis, the poor relation of the Jordans, Mrs. Robert McMillan gave a noteworthy performance, handling her lines expressively both in verbal presentation and in pantomime.

Carlotta Vance, the once toastless actress who knew which side the proverbial bread was buttered on, was portrayed in fine style by Mrs. William Dowling who was always at ease and made excellent stage appearance.

Mrs. S. N. Pickard as Millicent Jordan, a heavy feminine role, did nice work in characterizing the typical society woman whose social revolves around being the first to fete the Lord and Lady Ferncliffe.

Plays Role of Paula

Margaret Hecht, Appleton, as Paula Jordan, in love with Larry Renault but engaged to Henry, Robert Meyers, Appleton, as Dan Packard the loud westerner who was going to Washington to tell the president how to run the country. Christ John Dickinson, as Dr. Talbot, the society doctor who would not resist the advances of his wealthy feminine patients, handled their characterizations ably.

Tina, the personal maid of Kitty Packard, was portrayed by Jane Sensenbrenner neatly and not without humor.

Lesser characters but necessary to the plot were Ricci, played by Joe Gilman, Appleton; Miss Copeland, the stenographer, played by Christa Jersild, the bellboy played by Howard Jacobson; the waiter played by Maurice Hickey; Mr. Hatfield, played by John P. Canavan, Jr.; Miss Engel, the doctor's assistant, played by Jeanne Sage; Jo Stengel, the producer, played by Irwin Pearson and Ed Loomis played by James Woeckner, all of whom did nice work in characterizations.

Tunney's Remarks Come As Shock to Mr. Pegler

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER
New York — Gene Tunney's denunciation of the distilled spirits institute as a thing without social consciousness or soul was a severe shock to those of us who had let ourselves believe that the institute was something really fine. The very word institute suggests solidness and unselfish purpose, and then, too, the selection of the late W. Forbes Morgan as the Will Hays of the grog industry seemed to suggest that the institute was conducting itself in accordance with the ethics of the White House. That was reassuring, too.

Mr. Morgan, an uncle of Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, had been treasurer of the Democratic party, but only the diseased mind of a Liberty Leaguer would toy with the thought that he was chosen for a job paying $100,000 a year for any other reason than his own special fitness. The salary was $65,000, but there was also a fund of $35,000 a year, similar to the president's own travel allowance, of which he was not required to give a minute account.

Had he used his thumb on his official travels in the interests of the spiritual side of the whisky trade, or had he driven his own car like those congressmen who collect 20 cents a mile for travel which costs them a tenth of that, the savings would have been his.

The fact that the whisky industry owed its very life to the head of the party for whose triumphs Mrs. Roosevelt's uncle had toiled had nothing to do with his selection for a $100,000 job as head lobbyist for the industry, and if those low individuals in the audience who just pursed their lips and blew a vulgar note repeat the offense they will be thrown out.

We will have decorum here and a proper respect for the crown. Nobility Is Seen In Employment Of Baxter
Mr. Morgan died before he could do much to quicken the social consciousness and kindle the soul of the whisky trade, but it can never be said of the distilled spirits institute that it failed to discern special fitness. ter into a discussion of names. I hear you're interested in railroads." "Railroads?" Claydell's face was blank. "A particular railroad, then?" "I'm afraid I don't quite get you, Claydell said. 'I'm not interested in any railroad. Whatever gave you that notion? Were you expecting to sell me some stock, or something?'" "Ankrom said, 'Are you interested in acquiring the Rafter T?'" "No, especially. I made Trone an offer once, several years ago. He didn't want to sell, he said."

Ankrom's white teeth gleamed coldly behind his parted lips. "Did not want to sell, eh?" "What are you driving at?" Claydell snapped. "You wanted the Rafter T because you'd learned that a big road was planning to lay track from Amarillo to El Paso and would have to cross that land. You offered to buy, but Trone wouldn't sell. So you set out to smash him—to put him out of business so you could steal the property from Trone's daughter, for a fraction of its worth. You hired a bunch of saddle bums to rustle Rafter T beef. You bought Mose Hackett to help that deal along."

Claydell's eyes were widening; the first look of bewilderment was giving way to incredulity—to anger. "You weren't making headway fast enough," Ankrom continued. "You were afraid news of the railroad would be leaking out. So you bought Heflie, the sheepman, body and soul an' sicked him onto the water at Rafter T's southwest line camp. To hold that water in case Rafter T kicked up you gave Heflie a bunch of gun-shocks an' you brought Bandera, the Mex killer, in to strengthen Heflie's hand."

Tomorrow: Revelations from Claydell.
